Schools deplete surplus fund

The board of education is planning to virtually eliminate its surplus in the upcoming school year's operating budget. The board plans to cut $14 million in the wake of a tax defeat this spring.

BY DARRELL CLEM
STAFF WRITER

The Wayne-Westland school board's budget surplus will plummet from $7 million to $277,000 in the next year, pushing the district closer to the brink of financial collapse, officials said.

The board will have to nearly wipe out its $7-million surplus to avoid plunging into the new school year's projected deficit, officials said. It's illegal to operate at a deficit.

The projected surplus drain will come despite spending cuts of $14 million that will eliminate many school programs and cripple others.

Even more frightening, school officials will face even deeper cuts in 1994-95, but they will have almost no surplus money then, they said.

"We could be in a deficit walking into the door," Randy Liepa, the district's chief fiscal officer, said during a board meeting last week.

The budget crunch follows the defeat in April of a local tax proposal and the failure in June of Proposal A — a statewide tax-shift plan that would have boosted Wayne-Westland finances.

Some school trustees are worried that Wayne-Westland will face another $6.5 million in cuts in 1994-95 — in addition to the $14 million. The situation, labeled a crisis by school officials, has heightened fears of a possible shutdown.

School officials still hope that local voters will approve a tax increase this fall, helping to replace at least part of a 7.75-mill tax that expires Wednesday. (One mill represents $1 per $1,000 of state equalized valuation.)

Accident victim shows determined spirit

BY DARRELL CLEM

Timothy Alan Cassidy was scheduled to return to his Westland home Saturday night for the first time since his legs were amputated following a May 27 traffic accident.

The overnight stay with his parents, Chester and Christine Cassidy, came as the 18-year-old John Glenn High School graduate continues to amaze friends and family members with his determined spirit.

"His spirits are still good, and he's looking forward to coming home," Chester Cassidy said.

The teen was moved Monday to Chelsea Community Hospital from the University of Michigan Hospital in Ann Arbor, where he had been staying since the accident.

Cassidy also was allowed last week to take his first shower since the accident, his mother said, providing another indication that he is continuing to improve.

Cassidy's mother has been making two trips a day to Chelsea — one during the day and one in the evening — amounting to 160 miles a day. Her

Withdrawals mean no council primary

There will be no Westland city council primary Sept. 14 following the withdrawal of three of 10 candidates who filed petitions by Tuesday's deadline.

The withdrawal of Janet Gillies, Christine Kvasnak and Sonya Clausen shrunk the council field to seven, two fewer than needed for a primary.

There were no withdrawals in the mayoral race, for which six candidates are vying for the two nominations.

With no council primary, the seven candidates will be campaigning for four seats.

Gillies, Kvasnak and Clausen withdrew by the 4 p.m. Friday deadline, according to the city clerk's office.

Remaining in the mayoral primary are Kenneth Mehl, a 12-year councilman; Douglas Noel, an Internal Revenue Service employee; Charles Pickering, city council president, Kenneth Raupp, Ford Motor employee who previously ran for public office; Louis Telerico, who owns Telerico Co. Inc.; and Mayor Robert Thomas, seeking a second term.

The remaining council candidates whose names will be on the Nov. 2 ballot will be council member Sandra Cicirelli, David Cox, Bhagwan Dashairya, Joseph Eadeh, Charles Griffin, council member Sharon Scott and Dorothy Smith.

Westland woman's murder trial under way

BY DARRELL CLEM
STAFF WRITER

A murder trial began Thursday for a Westland woman accused of stabbing her boyfriend and setting his Lansdowne residence on fire to cover up the killing.

The trial of Kylleen Hargrave-Thomas, 41, accused of killing 42-year-old Manuel "Joe" Bernal, is expected to conclude Wednesday in Detroit Recorder's Court.

She faces a mandatory term of life in prison without parole if convicted on a charge of first-degree murder. She could be sentenced up to 20 years if found guilty of arson.

Bernal, a Ford Motor Co. railroad maintenance worker, was found dead in a bedroom of his 625 Lansdowne residence, northeast of Cherry Hill Road and Newburgh, about 7:30 a.m. Oct. 11. He was found in his bed, stabbed in the chest.

Westland firefighters found Bernal after they were called to the scene by a neighbor who saw flames in Bernal's second-floor bedroom.

Hargrave-Thomas opted to waive her right to a jury trial, and Judge Wendy Baxter will decide the case.

In court Thursday, retired Westland fire marshal Robert Ferry testified that the fire in Bernal's residence was caused by arson — a conclusion that also had been stated last July when the defendant appeared in Westland 18th District Court for a preliminary hearing.

Hargrave-Thomas has told police that she planned to marry Bernal, although he was known to have asked at least two other women for dates shortly before his death.

On Thursday, Bernal's father, Manuel Bernal, testified that he identified his son's body after he was found dead. Prosecutors also showed videotapes in court that were filmed of the murder scene — both inside and outside of Bernal's house, Nowaczck said.

Testimony was not heard Friday, but will continue today (Monday) in Recorder's Court.

In court testimony last July, Nowaczck testified that Hargrave-Thomas admitted visiting Bernal on the night of his murder, but she claimed he was alive when she left in the early morning hours. Hargrave-Thomas, a former Livonia receptionist, lived about 2½ miles away on Barchester Street.

Prosecutors, however, believe she killed Bernal during her visit and returned to his house about 5:15 a.m. to set the fire. One of Bernal's neighbors has testified that a car matching the description of the defendant's 1989 Beretta was seen returning to Bernal's house.

A neighbor also told police that the garage door of Bernal's house was open about the same time, though it was closed and the house was locked up when firefighters arrived to fight the upstairs fire.

Police have said Hargrave-Thomas had a garage door opener.

Testimony also has implicated the defendant in an apparent fingernail scratch found near the knife wounds in Bernal's chest.

Man held in bank holdups

BY TEDD SCHNEIDER
STAFF WRITER

Livonia Police and FBI agents Monday arrested a Melvindale man in connection with a string of spring bank robberies in Livonia, Westland and Dearborn.

At least two of the targets are the same ones Thomas Leslie McClain was convicted of robbing five years ago.

McClain, 27, spent 37 months in federal prison at Milan following those holdups.

McClain was in a supervised release program and working at a Melvindale glass manufacturing plant at the time of his arrest.

"It's not an everyday occurrence, but it has happened before," an FBI spokesman said.

"They're familiar with the area. They feel they were successful before and they can get away with it again."

McClain was arraigned June 21 in federal court for the June 4 robbery at a Michigan National Bank branch, on Ann Arbor Trail at Wayne Road, Livonia.

U.S. District Judge Paul J. Komives accepted a motion by prosecutors to have McClain detained pending trial. He will likely be returned to a federal prison, said U.S. attorney Charles Holman.

Holman said McClain has been placed on a "fast-track" schedule and would come up for trial within 60-90 days.

If convicted, he faces a maximum 20-year sentence.

A three-count indictment, including a March 29 Dearborn holdup and the April 12 robbery at Standard Federal Bank on Wayne Road in Westland, has been scheduled, Holman said.

Westland Sgt. Marc Stobbe has said a man handed a note to a teller, 22, teller demanding money and escaped with $3,900.

No weapon was seen, although the man implied he had a gun.

Police arrived at the scene less than 30 seconds after the robbery but couldn't find the robber.

In the Livonia case, a man witnesses described as calm and apparently an experienced robber escaped with $1,400 after handing the teller a note.

A teller said the robber repeatedly ducked — apparently trying to avoid the security camera. He also requested a variety of denominations and told her "not to give him a dye pack (booby-trapped bills)," the teller told police.

McClain was charged in two of the 1988 robberies, including one at the Westland Standard Federal branch and suspected of three others, including the Michigan National branch in Livonia.

In fact, it was the Livonia robbery five years ago that led to McClain, police and FBI officials said.

"He saw the (bank surveillance) photo — which wasn't very good — and he said we should check to see if the guy was still in jail," said Sgt. Jesse Bartlett, the Livonia detective handling the case.

Court records indicated McClain was living in the area and on the release program as part of his parole.

That would be a temporary fix, however. Officials hope that the state will pay for education, reducing the school district's reliance on local property taxes.

Wayne-Westland's proposed 1993-94 budget includes $81.1 million in spending and $74.4 million in revenues — a gap that will force the school board to deplete its surplus or face a deficit.

The budget shrunk from last year's $85.6 million in spending and $83.7 million in revenues — nearly a $10-million drop in revenues in one year.

Addressing the school board, Liepa warned that "we will need to do a yeoman's job" in monitoring the budget. The newly proposed budget could be approved as early as today (Monday) during the board's 7 p.m. meeting.

Some school board trustees and Wayne-Westland residents have urged employee concessions, particularly from teachers, whose contract calls for a 5-percent raise this year.

"I'm sorry they have a right to a raise. Our children have a right to read," resident Joan Hicks said.

She termed the district's budget problems "a disaster" and said "it's beyond my comprehension."

Several employee groups have been working a year without a contract, and some hourly workers have suggested that teachers should agree to concessions.

School trustee Francis "Bud" Winter has made public his concerns about rising costs for central office administrators and their support staff. Those costs are expected to increase more than $88,000 in the next year, from $623,000 to $711,000.

Winter called the increase "inconceivable" in the wake of deep cuts affecting students and employees. He criticized the central office cost increases that will come as some elementary schools prepare to share a principal.

"When I looked at this, I was just appalled," Winter said, referring to the administrative budget.

Winter also criticized a 9-percent raise and a 4.5-percent annuity that Superintendent Larry Thomas is to receive in the next year, an increase from the $111,136 that he has been paid in first-year salary and benefits.

But trustee Laurel Raisanen, who has noted that Thomas is earning less than his predecessor, Dennis O'Neill, defended Thomas against Winter's criticisms.

"Is it a high price? Yes. Is it a competitive cost? Yes. But I believe this board of education negotiated a good contract," she said.

CLARIFICATION

A letter to the editor from Douglas Noel printed in Thursday's Observer should have referred to Wayne-Westland school Superintendent Larry Thomas, not Westland Mayor Robert Thomas.

A story about the Westland mayoral candidates in the Thursday Westland Observer should have said that Louis Telerico is the owner of Telerico Electric Corp. Inc., Westland.

Jennifer Soronen crowned festival queen

Jennifer Soronen admitted that she felt like fainting Saturday night when she heard that she was named the Westland Summer Festival pageant queen.

Fortunately, she regained her composure and received a tiara, flowers and a trophy.

With plenty of energy and enthusiasm, she grasped the trophy in her right hand, stood at the edge of the stage and waved the trophy in front of the audience, which includes her family and friends, like an athlete whose team had just won a national championship.

Jennifer said she was surprised at winning the pageant, held at Westland Center. The title enables her to reign during this week's annual summer festival and represent the city in numerous other public functions during the next 12 months.

The pageant queen is 18 and attends Schoolcraft College. A Franklin High School graduate, she plans to become a physical therapist.

All three received trophies, flowers and gift certificates.

The other contestants were Amy Kristen Kumm, Ann-Marie Zazula, Jennifer Ann Jackson, Gail Brusseau, Suzanne Nicole Gossett and Melissa Walker.

The contestants were judged on the basis of application information, poise, appearance and speaking ability.

The pageant was planned by a committee consisting of co-chairwomen Pam Martin and Erica Wager, Susan Byrom, Susan Hatfield, Sandi Wager and Peggy Collier.

Also taking part in the pageant were Michael Frayer, former Westland police chief, who was master of ceremonies; Karen Lee, last year's pageant winner; and Amy Wess, the 1991 pageant queen.

Judges for the pageant were Ed Wager, festival committee chairman; Maureen Lewis, Westland Center marketing assistant; Shelly Bialo, modeling instructor and a prior Wayne-Westland Junior Miss scholarship pageant winner; Robert Tolliver, Westland water and sewer department superintendent; Leonard Poger, Westland Observer community editor; and Jennifer Placinto of the Westland Eagle.

The pageant was this summer festival's first event and will be followed by a parade, scheduled to start at 7 p.m. Wednesday at Ford and Wildwood and continue west to city hall. The festival will open with a full schedule of activities Thursday and will continue through Monday, July 5, in the Civic Center, on Ford east of Newburgh.

Festival offers fun for all

Something for all ages will be offered at the Westland Summer Festival, which opens Wednesday with a colorful parade and continues through Monday night with fireworks, carnival rides, food booths, games and free entertainment.

"La Showbiz" is how Sam Corrado, festival spokesman, described the upcoming five-day series of events.

He said the parade, to start at 7 p.m. Wednesday, will offer several new wrinkles.

Corrado said two stuffed animals will be given to youngsters along the parade route, and youngsters and their parents will be offered golf-cart rides along the parade route, which will start at Ford and Wildwood and continue to city hall.

At the same time, Continental Baking has packaged 10,000 Hostess cupcakes with baseball cards. Jaycees dressed in baseball uniforms will pass them out to parade-watchers.

Westland Rotarians will be involved in the parade to randomly give prizes to children along the route.

The festival committee will also have 40 cases of household items transported through the parade route and later donated to First Step, a private, non-profit organization that provides domestic violence victims with shelter and other services.

During the festival itself, Corrado said, a new feature will be the "mystery person" event, which will have about 500 gift certificates given out to festival-goers who will be picked at random by the Westland Chamber of Commerce.

In that new program, a person will be either given a prize immediately or be directed to the festival stage or chamber booth to get gift certificates.

The fireworks will be ignited at dusk Sunday, with only the carnival to be held Monday, July 5, because the holiday falls on a Sunday.

During the five days of the festival, food booths will be manned by civic or church groups as fundraisers. The groups are the Westland Youth Athletic Association, VFW Post 4553, Jaycees, Westland Explorers, St. George and Nectarios Church and women's auxiliary, Westland Figure Skating Club, St. Constantine and Helen Greek Orthodox Church, and the Wayne County Sheriff's Department Explorers Post 817.

■ The fireworks will be ignited at dusk Sunday, with only the carnival to be held Monday, July 5.

Schedule of events

The Westland Festival Committee has a full schedule of activities for the event, which opens Wednesday with a parade and free entertainment. Man acquitted in motel holdup, sexual assault

BY TEDD SCHNEIDER
STAFF WRITER

A Recorder's Court jury Friday acquitted David Eron White of the October 1992 robbery of a Livonia Super 8 motel and the sexual assault of a desk clerk, despite emotional testimony from the Westland woman.

Jurors deliberated about three hours after the two-day trial before Judge Thomas E. Jackson.

They apparently were swayed by arguments from defense attorney Leroy Daggs.

Daggs disputed the victim's identification of White as her assailant, both in a photograph and in a live lineup the day after the robbery.

On Wednesday, the victim pointed out White in court as the man who walked into the motel Oct. 29, filled out a registration card using an alias, and then fondled her in a back room after forcing her to disrobe.

The victim, now 23, told the court she was "terrified" by the incident during her third night on the job at the motel, on Schoolcraft east of Middlebelt.

She was on the telephone with a friend when a man walked in and asked about room rates. After filling out a registration card in the name of "Lamont Davis" the man patted his pockets as if he were looking for money and instead pulled a revolver from his waistband, the victim testified.

"I screamed, 'Please don't kill me.' " she told the court.

After taking $130 from a front cash drawer, the gunman forced her into the back room and slammed the still-off-the-hook telephone back down.

He forced open a desk cabinet with $515 inside, she testified, and then told her to remove her clothes. He fondled her and made lewd remarks, the victim testified.

The victim testified Wednesday she was positive when identifying the defendant for police.

But Daggs pointed to her statements to police and in a preliminary examination regarding the identification.

"I guess that's him," the victim said at the time.

"Somebody may have robbed her that night," Daggs told the jury. "But it certainly wasn't that man sitting right there next to me."

White, 37, of Detroit was charged with armed robbery, second-degree criminal sexual conduct, and possession of a firearm during the commission of a felony.

White, a blacksmith at Ladbroke DRC, told police he returned to the track that night to retrieve a lost wallet.

His girlfriend testified that she accompanied White and that he never went to the motel.

Summer reading to begin

Westland youngsters can take advantage of the annual summer reading program sponsored by the Wayne-Westland Public Library.

"Make a Splash! Read!" is the theme of the summer program, to be held in the library on Wayne Road and Sims, Wayne.

Registration is open to preschoolers and elementary schoolaged children through Wednesday, said Lisa Rieman, youth services librarian. The readers will take part in the program to be held at 10 a.m. Fridays July 9 through July 30, she said.

There will be a different topic and entertainment each week, startiing with "Make a Splasah" with Ming and Magnificent on July 9; "Reptiles" at Oakwoods Metropark on July 16; "World of Fishing" with Vivian Sheedy on July 23, and 'Strike Up the Rhythm Band" with Val Krause on July 30.

She added that all children are invited to attend an egg hatch setting by 4-H agent David Crawford at 1 p.m., Wednesday, July 7, at the library.

Persons must register in person for the summer program. Library hours are 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. Monday through Thursday and 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Friday and Saturday.

Amputee

husband joins her for the evening visit.

Cassidy, a John Glenn wrestling team letter-winner, was crushed between two cars while trying to push a friend's stalled Mazda off Ford Road near Carlson. An off-duty Westland police officer who glanced away from the road hit Cassidy from behind.

Doctors don't yet know when he might get to come home for good. It could be months.

Cassidy will later be fitted for a prosthesis, but he is not yet ready, his mother said. The wounds on his legs, which were amputated above the knees, haven't yet healed enough, she said.

In related action, the 82nd Airborne Division Association, Wolverine Chapter, has announced that donations may be made to the Cassidy family.

Cassidy's father had been an Army paratrooper and is vice chairman of the Wolverine Chapter. He also is a troop scout leader.

Timothy Cassidy has been a leader in the Wolverine Boy Scout Troop 864 and is still planning to study for the rank of Eagle Scout, said Gene Yarnell, Wolverine Chapter spokesman.

Donations may be made to the Cassidy Fund, c/o Wolverine Chaplain Robert Watkins, 35047 Farragut, Westland 48185, Yarnell said.

Money is needed for a ramp that Cassidy will need for access to and from his home, when he returns permanently from the hospital, Yarnell said Friday. Money also will be needed for a lift for the family van, Yarnell said.

The Wolverine Chapter also is planning a fund-raiser for later this year that will help the Cassidy family with expenses. More details will be released later, Yarnell said.

3 Boy Scouts from Westland awarded Eagle Scout ranking

Three Westland Boy Scouts were elevated to Eagle rank at a recent court of honor held by Troop 765.

They are Michael Iwanski, Eric Criteser and Christopher Iskra.

Iwanski, who graduated from John Glenn High School in June, joined the Cub Scouts 10 years ago. For his Eagle project, he refinished and painted picnic tables and playground equipment for the Youth Living Center facility in Inkster. His most memorable Scouting experience was the 1992 summer camp at Lost Lake, near Claire, Mich.

Iskra, who just completed his junior year at John Glenn High, joined Scouting in 1987. For his Eagle project, he organized a food bank for needy persons through St. John Episcopal Church, Westland. His most memorable Scouting experience was attending the 1989 Scout National Jamboree in Washington, D.C.

Criteser, who is a John Glenn High junior, joined the Scouts in 1984. His Eagle project was furnishing a recreation room for the Western-Wayne Child and Family Services Center in Taylor, complete with a handmade book case, chairs and a TV set.

Taking part in the court of honor were troop committee chairman Andrew Iskra, district advancement chairman Anthony Kilyanek, Kent Jensen, district chairman, senior district executive Craig Church, Scoutmaster Leland Guilford, assistant scoutmaster Daniel Jones, the Rev. Raymond Zips and members of the Army's 82nd Airborne Division.

Treasuring the hunt

Summer seems the perfect time to while away an afternoon browsing through antique store. Everyone loves a treasure hunt. The anticipation of discovering the unexpected is surpassed only by the excitement of procuring that long sought-after collectible.

Antique buffs can spend hours poking through jam-packed nooks and crannies, searching for something that has a special, personal appeal. It's often an emotional quest, a stirring of forgotten memories.

This shopping phenomenon, likened to a scavenger hunt, is embarked upon by two distinct types of individuals — those who seek specific items for wise investments and those who let their hearts do the shopping, ignoring trends and unearthing jewels that only they can fully appreciate.

Nostalgia seems to be driving many of today's collectors.

"People are looking for the things they grew up with," said Angela Mifsud of Memory Lane Antiques, 12 Forest Place in Plymouth. That explains the popularity of merchandise manufactured in the '40s and '50s. Notable is the rise in value of Duncan Phyfe reproduction mahogany furniture, sewing accessories, Weiss and Miriam B. Haskell rhinestone jewelry and colorful pottery from Hall, Roseville, Hull and McCoy.

Prints from past

My favorite collectibles are the cheerfully printed cloths that were draped over kitchen tables in the '30s and '40s. These sturdy cotton textiles exhibit fruit and floral patterns in bright and pastel hues. I've transformed the vintage fabrics into window treatments and pillows, but they really enliven the table and look particularly pretty on a patio or deck. Expect to pay between $12 and $40 and don't expect to find a wide selection at any one store. That just makes the hunt more fun.

Josephine Watson of Northville, a longtime antique collector, cited English bone china and Victorian furniture as two of her favorites. She also looks for cranberry glass and hallmarked silver.Many collectors have a passion for pitchers and most would agree that the pictured Henriot Quimper design is a true find ($145). This artful early 20th century piece from the famous French company is an example of the eclectic mix of beautifully displayed antiquities at L'Esprit, 336 E. Maple in Birmingham.

Ed Throckmorton guided me through his shop, which features a cosmopolitan melange of French, American, English and German furniture and accessories. Star and moon motifs are still hot, according to Throckmorton, as are unusual examples of ironwork and architecturals.

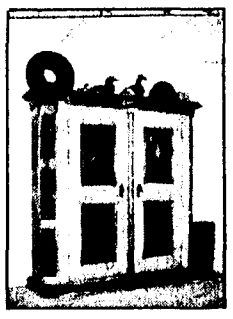
Collectibles count

Sharon Hood, owner of Bits and Pieces in Plymouth's historic Old Village district, finds that people are looking for collectibles this summer, not true antiques. People "ooh and aah" over the Civil War-era gown, for instance, but they're not buying.

"I'm just about out of oak furniture," she said. "And good cut glass, not pressed, is popular." She also has a hard time holding onto sports memorabilia, especially vintage golfing gear. In addition, her rainbow-colored Fiesta, Vistosa and LuRay tableware is literally selling out of the window.

Carol Butgusaim, visiting from Minneapolis, is always on the lookout for Fiesta ware, and was lured by Hood's window display.

"I also collect Depression glass," she said. "The pressed patterns are easiest to find." Her friend, Madeline Tracht of Plymouth, sets a vibrant table with her inherited set of Fiesta ware. She loves to mix and match all of the colors. "I'm continually searching for the divided serving dishes," she said.It's fun to scout around for inexpensive little collectibles, but occasionally you want a centerpiece, like the pictured armoire from Watch Hill Antiques, 330 E. Maple in Birmingham. Open just four months in the downtown location, this shop features exquisite painted European country furniture, virtual conversation pieces around which to decorate a room. Most are late 18th to mid-19th century examples from Austria and Germany, ranging in price from $600 to $9,000.



Happy hunting and don't forget to listen to your heart — buy what you love.

Second-hand style: Vikki Keehm owner of Regeneration in downtown Plymouth says her customers often ask her why her prices are so low. "They don't realize this is a resale shop," she laughed.

Tips help shoppers avoid 'lemons'

BY SUSAN DEMAGGIO
STAFF WRITER

A "find" at a secondhand shop is only a bargain if it is wearable, comfortable and cleanable.

To ensure that your bargains aren't busts, shop owners and savvy second-time-around shoppers offer the following tips:

- Don't pay more than a third of a garment's original shop price.
- Charity shops are a gold mine for vintage footwear.
- Unless you are an expert seamstress, don't buy anything that needs drastic altering. Modern dry-cleaning methods will ruin ancient, delicate fabrics.
- Avoid buying anything that is badly stained. Even if your aunt is Heloise, you probably won't be able to remove set stains.
- A key to the age of the garment is the shoulder cut. Clothing manufactured prior to the 1980s did not have relaxed shoulders or padding.
- Evening wear bargains come in nostalgic or dramatic shapes from the past and assure that you don't meet your double.
- Before you buy, check for stains,

A guide to resale shops:

Some of the most popular second-time-around shops are listed below:

- Children's Orchard: 6629 Orchard Lake, W. Bloomfield, 626-0690.
- The Clothes Horse: 1921 South Blvd. Troy, 879-6070.

Resale shops on rise

"I got it at a thrift shop!" one woman proclaimed with pride. The age of recycling and value con sciousness has brought secondhand stores into the '90s.

BY SUSAN DEMAGGIO
STAFF WRITER

A back-to-basics movement with eyes on the environment has given secondhand shops a new reason-to-be.

Several local consignment shops have moved into larger quarters recently, reporting that more people than ever before are stopping in to sell suits, dresses and children's wear that deserve a second chance with a new owner.

"The frivolousness of the '80s is gone," said Kathy Newton, owner of "Lots for Tots" at Livernois and Walton in Rochester Hills. "Then it was not socially acceptable to visit secondhand stores. Now, neighbors go out shopping together and it's considered prudent to use and recycle durable goods."

Newton started her children's resale shop several years ago in a small Walnut Street basement in downtown Rochester.

"We just blew out of there in no time," she said, "moving to larger and larger locations. In fact, we just opened a franchise store in Madison Heights, the demand is so great."

By controlling the quality of items for resale and designing the interiors to be shopper-friendly, today's suburban resale shops are pretty, airy and almost sophisticated. Items are clearly tagged, displayed according to category and size, and there are also amenities such as seating for the weary, cartoon monitors for children, and Victorian, full-length mirrors.

Business is 'steady'

At "Regeneration" in downtown Plymouth in the Westchester Mall, business is steady, according to owner Vikki Keehm.

"Last year, our first year in business, we paid out over $14,000 in consignments," she said. "Customers like the store because it's set up like a boutique, not a resale shop. We look at 'Regeneration' as a service, providing the opportunity for women to own a $150 Leslie Fay dress for just $25. You might think our customers are low-income, but this is not the case. Our customers are anyone with an eye on value who loves a good bargain."

"Regeneration," like many other resale shops, offers clients a 50/50 split on the sale price of the garment. The price is set by the owner with input from Keehm. Garments are kept for a few months and then the owner has the opportunity to reclaim or donate the item.

"The store name comes from a suit, framed and hanging on a wall in the store, worn 50 years ago by my husband and recently by my grandson," she said. "It could still be worn by somebody else."

To recycle the unsold items, Keehm works with area churches and homes for the aged.

Mary Shook, owner of the 18-year-old "The Clothes Horse" in Troy, said the notion that resale shopping is "hush-hush" is "pooh-pooh."

"Resale shopping is smart shopping," she said. "My customers are working women who need the suit and blouse but can't afford the department store prices."

Shook sells designer and name brand women's apparel in a lovely boutique on South Boulevard and Crooks. She recently moved from a smaller shop on Square Lake, leaving the spot to "The Kids Kloset," a new resale shop for infants and toddlers. Ellie Vanderleden of Troy said she has made some wonderful purchases at "The Clothes Horse" and other area resale shops.

Her routine

"It's part of my routine to once a month visit several secondhand shops in the area," she said. "I make a day of it. You'd be surprised how far $50 goes when you're not shopping in a mall."

In March, a new kind of resale shop for children opened on Rochester Road between Big Beaver and Wattles in Troy. Owner Kim Lammers buys her secondhand inventory directly from the previous owners and passes the savings on to a growing list of clientele.

"Wear It Again Kids" on Middlebelt in Farmington Hills operates the same way.

'Kids outgrow their clothes before the clothes show signs of wear," said Margaret Brennan of Troy, browsing through the racks in search of a bathing suit for her 2-year-old daughter. "Why should I pay $12 at a department store when I can pick up a cute hardly-worn suit for $2? She'll only be in it for three months anyway. I'm saving my dollars for her teens when she wants a designer suit."

It's hard to recall any disadvantages to secondhand shopping with a spotless, hand-smocked, gingham blue Polly Flinders party dress priced at $16 hanging on a rack.

"My 12 grandchildren have a very clever grandmother," she said with a wink. "I never forget their birthdays, giving gifts that are always within my budget."

■ 'Customers like the store because it's set up like a boutique, not a resale shop.'

Regeneration

On Woodward north of 14 Mile Road in Birmingham two secondhand shops have steadily built a customer base for more than 10 years. "Valerie Taylor" sells designer accessories and clothing for women at one-fourth the original price.

"Our Coach and Chanel bags are gone as soon as they're in," the manager said. "Lucky shoppers can find the likes of Claude Montana, Chanel, Escada and Anne Klein II on the racks, but merchandise moves fast."

Close by, "The Treasure Trunk" mixes home accessories with secondhand women's clothing. The store features a lot of skirts and handbags, with everything, clean, pressed and tear-free.

In Southfield, "New To You" owner Lee Better said business last year and this year is very good. Her nine-year-old shop also resells designer apparel on a consignment basis. "New To You" is located on Southfield Road between 12 Mile and 13 Mile.

Not all resale shops target women and children. "The Garden City Exchange" at Ford Road and Venoy sells used electronic equipment and previously owned musical instruments.

"The Great Exchange," on Greenfield south of Nine Mile in Southfield, sells furniture and home accessories on a consignment basis.

"We're the biggest furniture resaler in Michigan," said owner Fred Brooks. "In addition to offering merchandise from estate sales, we have factory over-runs and canceled special orders."

Most secondhand shops are closed Mondays and Sundays. Many require an appointment for consignment appraisals.

■ Replace missing buttons from the correct period that match the style of the dress or suit.

Break a leg! Execs to co-host TV show

BY RALPH R. ECHTINAW
STAFF WRITER

Two veteran metro Detroit politicians will co-host their own weekly public affairs program on Channel 4 beginning 12:30 p.m. Sunday, July 11.

If the laughs produced by their pilot program (which has never been broadcast) can be repeated and sustained, Wayne County Executive, Edward McNamara and Oakland County Executive L. Brooks Patterson may be the TV stars of the '90s.

"Ed McNamara will take the wrong side of every issue and I'll take the Republican side," Patterson elucidated.

Although McNamara is a personal friend, Patterson added, "politically we don't agree on a lot."

McNamara retorted with, "As long as everybody understands that the L in L. Brooks Patterson stands for liberal we can go from there. (Patterson) is not the brightest person, but I think he's got potential. He does need someone to prop him up and I think that'll be my job."

In deference to the exulted status of the co-stars, WDIV-TV officials have given the program alternating titles. One week it'll be called "The Brooks and Ed Show." The next week . . . "The Ed and Brooks Show."

Taping of the premier episode is scheduled to occur the evening of Thursday, July 8. If you'd like to attend this historic event, call Oakland County spokesman Robert Dustman at 858-1048, or Wayne County spokeswoman Irma Clark at 224-0831. Each co-host is entitled to 25 guests.

Russian students need local host families

If you can provide a place to stay for any of five Russian high school exchange students soon to arrive in metropolitan Detroit, let West Bloomfield resident Herb Piilo (932-3594) know by the end of June.

Herb and Dorothy Piilo are state directors of PACE International Institute, an organization devoted to the fostering of world understanding through international student exchange, need help in housing the high school-age students who will arrive in mid-August for a 10-month stay.

PACE has been selected by the U.S. government to administer the placement of 60 scholarship students from the former Soviet Union under the auspices of the Fredom Support Act proposed by Sen. Bill Bradley. The scholarship program is part of a U.S. aid package to the former Soviet Republics of Armenia, Azerbaijan, Belarus, Georgia, Kazakhstan, Krygystan, Moldova, Tajikistan, Turkmenistan, Ukraine, Ozbekistan and the Russian Federation.

"The purpose is to offer students from the former Soviet Union an opportunity to experience democracy first hand," said Annie Green, central regional director of PACE.

"This experience and knowledge can then be brought back and shared with others in their home countries and hopefully inspire continued energy and commitment toward democratic reform in the former Soviet republics.

The five students to be placed in this metropolitan area are Marina Cherentsova from Ukrain, Khusvav Tajiddinow from Tajikistan and Oleg Smirnov, Ilya Gutkovich and Anna Maximenko from the Russian Republic.

"If we want peace in this world, if we want people to understand what America is about and why we love our country then we need to have these students come here," said Dorothy Piilo.

Those interested in accepting a Russian exchange student may contact the Piilos at 932-3594 or 539-3761 or contact PACE Institue International at (800) 895-0142.

Other exchange students need homes too

Host families are being sought for exchange students from France, Germany, Spain and Mexico.

Evelyn Prince of West Bloomfield, state coordinator of Nacel Cultural Exchanges, reports that more than 40 Spanish and French boys and a few girls scheduled to arrive July 1 and 7 are still seeking hosts. Call 626-6641 to volunteer.

To become a host, families must supply references and be willing to introduce the foreign students to teenagers. The exchange students, ages 13-18, have spending money, insurance and speak English.

Prince is also seeking hosts for a group of 56 boys and 40 girls from France, Spain, Germany and Mexico scheduled to touch down at Metro Airport on July 24.

Notice: Public Participation for Regional Long Range Transportation Plan
From: SEMCOG, the Southeast Michigan Council of Governments

The Southeast Michigan Region is federally mandated to revise its Long Range Transportation Plan (LRTP) as a result of the Intermodal Surface Transportation Efficiency Act. The LRTP looks ahead 20 years at the transportation needs of Wayne, Oakland, Macomb, St. Clair, Monroe, Livingston and Washtenaw Counties.

This plan is being revised with input from federal, state and local government levels and must be completed by October 1, 1993. Local elected officials will make decisions about how to prioritize spending of transportation dollars for road reconstruction, road improvements and the building of new roads. Policy decisions must also be made about other forms of transportation - buses, airports, bicycles and trains - for example. In addition, the 1990 Clean Air Act identifies Southeast Michigan as a moderate non-attainment area. The LRTP must support efforts to reduce regional hydrocarbon emissions by 15% by 1996 as required by the Clean Air Act.

Public participation is a vital ingredient in the revision of the LRTP. Elected officials must have some sense of the public will if a comprehensive plan is to be developed that addresses regional transportation needs.

A public information meeting will be held to provide an opportunity to comment on roadway deficiencies. The meeting will be held:

- Thursday, July 1, 1993, 1:30 p.m., at the Southeast Michigan Council of Governments office, 660 Plaza Drive, Suite 1900, Detroit. For additional information contact John Rempala, at 313-961-4266.

Written comments are also welcome.

MUSIC NOTES

New Model Army is ready to rebuild its American following now that it's signed with a new label, Epic Records.

"(Previously) it all went horribly wrong for us in the United States," said guitarist/vocalist Justin Sullivan.

What aided in that mess, Sullivan said, was the lack of support by its former label, Capital Records.

Because of that, New Model Army decided to concentrate on its European fans. They're now selling out venues that seat 3,000-10,000. The group played at St. Andrew's Hall in Detroit June 23, in support of its first Epic release and sixth overall, "The Love of Hopeless Causes."

Despite the business problems, Sullivan has always enjoyed playing here.

"Motown is the home of the greatest pop music ever made," he said. "The minds of the West came together when Barry Gordy left Detroit and went to L.A."

Are members of Radiohead creeps like their hit implies?

"Yes and it's a good thing," said lead guitarist/keyboardist Jonny Greenwood during a phone conversation from Amsterdam.

Actually, the dreary song isn't really that depressing, he said.

"People think we're saying, 'I'm a creep and I don't want to be.' It's a self-realization; it's realizing what you are."

Greenwood, who's a little jaded by his band's success, doesn't mind answering the "creep question," but he's sick of telling how he makes his guitar crack before the chorus.

He and the rest of his band will play St. Andrew's Hall in Detroit on Thursday, July 1 — fireworks night. Call 961-MELT for more information.

17 Reasons Why won $1,000 or an equal value of Yamaha equipment at "Soundcheck," the Yamaha music showcase June 15 at the State Theatre in Detroit. Bent Lucy, Blue Nation, Psycho Cafe and The Rainbirds also competed.

The group will now compete in the regional showcase, also to be held in Detroit in mid-summer. Regional winners will get $5,000 or an equal value of Yamaha equipment and an all-expense paid trip to the national showcase. The national winner will receive $25,000 or an equal value of Yamaha equipment and an all-expense paid trip to Japan to represent the United States in the international showcase, "MusicQuest."

The Detroit area plays a prominent part in "Details" magazine's annual music issue, which hit the stands earlier this month. The photo of Tom Jones accompanying an interview with him was shot near the giant Uniroyal Tire on I-94. George Clinton's Brooklyn, Mich., home is profiled in the "Crib Notes" section.

In the flow chart of "ambient music," Derrick May and Detroit techo are cuddled between Brian Eno and "armchair techno" acts like Biosphere and Irresistible Force.

According to "Details" the local bands The Charm Farm, Goober and the Peas, Brotherhood Recipee and The Del-Kats are the hip bands in town. A lot more Detroit club scene treasures are buried in the July issue of the magazine.

Previously influenced by Sly, Clinton and Marley, they now add Coltrane, Zorn and the Butthole Surfers to their list. A bit angry: Turning their personal angst into a winning musical sound is HAL — keyboardist/bassist Justin Mysza (left), vocalist Myk Willis, guitarist/vocalist Michael Madill, drummer Ken Wilson and keyboardist Robert McCarroll.

HAL puts its anger to music

Getting dumped by their girlfriends may have hurt, but it gave Michael Madill and Robert McCarroll a focus. They formed a band and used their music to say the things they couldn't say to former girlfriends.

BY CHRISTINA FUOCO
STAFF WRITER

When Michael Madill and Robert McCarroll got dumped by their long-time girlfriends a year ago, they didn't let themselves seep into depression or a self-destructive path.

Instead they started a band — quite an angry one at that.

"We both got dumped from 3-, 4-year relationships; we had nowhere else to go," said guitarist/vocalist Madill. "With all the lyrics, we get to say all the things we couldn't say to her (before)."

Now that they're in more satisfying relationships, HAL is finding it tough to stay angry.

"We just have to stay angry. I wanted to go through my girlfriend's journals, so I could read about old guys and be jealous and bash the keyboards, but she wouldn't let me," said McCarroll with a laugh.

That intense anger has led HAL to become one of the most animated, energetic industrial bands in the area. The band's shows are strengthened by a massive video screen backdrop which accompanies

STREET BEATS

HAL to most shows. It's been a "member" since HAL's first show in September 1992.

"We played without it once at Paycheck's; it was really strange," said McCarroll, a Roeper High School graduate.

The film has evolved from a "loop of flashing yellow lights and a bucket of dry ice" to high-tension wires and newsreels from wars, said the band's "image artist" Kevin Leeser.

"Anything that's disturbing . . . anything that doesn't look pretty," he explained.

Recently, all this earned the Rochester-based band the $1,000 top prize in the Modern Rock Jam held at the State Theatre in Detroit. With the money they won, they recorded their debut CD at the Tempermill studio in Ferndale.

In describing themselves, the group is adamant about its selfishness. HAL doesn't sing about their entire world, just its own. "The band is selfish. It's not to change the world. It's not that we're anti-world," said vocalist Myk Willis.

The tall, hefty Madill and the average-built Willis share vocal duties — Madill does all the rapping and Willis performs the melodic parts. Ken Wilson plays drums.

McCarroll, who does all of the computer programming, shares keyboard duties with bassist Justin Mysza.

"Bob does more of the rhythm-oriented programming. I would be more textural chords and loops and samples. Bob's samples are more rhythm oriented," Mysza said.

McCarroll has a different explanation.

"Justin does the smooth and icing on the cake stuff, the glossy stuff. I do all the grunge and the beats . . . all the muddy dirgy stuff. Anything that's distorted, that's me."

The lyrics are written by Madill, who recently graduated from the University of Michigan with a degree in English.

"He (Robert) like spits out these elementary grade school things," Madill said.

"And he makes them smart, evil and brilliant," said Wilson.

HAL performs on Friday, July 2, at Paycheck's Lounge, 2932 Caniff, Hamtramck. For more information, call 874-0909. The group will also perform Friday, Aug. 13, at Freedom Hill in Sterling Heights with Majesty Crush and Surge to Union.

Brothers searching for a kinder planet

BY CHRISTINA FUOCO
STAFF WRITER

Brothers From Another Planet is tired of being misunderstood.

They're not militant, rap, techno or funk rock.

"We're ghetto metal; we announce it at every other show. We're not rock 'n' roll. We're not thrash. (Ghetto metal) has nothing to do with our ethnic background," said vocalist James Page.

"We just tell the truth," added bassist Gordon Spencer. "We don't preach about anything. We talk about racism - black against white, white against white, white against black, black against black. A lot of people get mad. The truth hurts."

To them, the truth is Brothers From Another Planet can't play many shows in this area due to local club owners' poor treatment of the band.

"That hurts me more than the backstabbing," said Page, an Ann Arbor resident. "We can go 30 minutes away and get the red carpet treatment."

Here, the band is paid poorly.

"The bar owners don't want to pay anything. If you want to pay the money for a quality car, you'll get a quality car. If you want to pay $100 for a clunker, that's what you'll get," said Spencer, an Oak Park resident.

"I would rather wait for the big bucks than burn myself out for the itty bitty dimes," Page said.

The "big bucks" they say are found in areas like Ann Arbor, Grand Rapids, Ohio, New York and Europe, where they'll trek to in August.

To help with their cause, group members joined the Black Rock Coalition, an organization founded by Vernon Reid of Living Colour.

"It helps out a lot . . . It's about being able to play clubs no matter what you look like; it's about the music," Spencer said.

The organization is helping them get bigger shows out of state. To succeed outside the area, the group needed to strengthen its professionalism

'Menace' depicts roots of violence

BY JOHN MONAGHAN
STAFF WRITER

■ MOVIES

Another movie about L.A. teenagers totin' guns and talkin' trash to a noisy rap-music soundtrack? Maybe that's why it took me over a month to see "Menace II Society," the impressive new urban melodrama currently making a splash both at local theaters and on the editorial page.

Directed by a pair of former Detroiters, twin brothers Allen and Albert Hughes, this ranks next to "Boyz 'n the Hood" as a movie that opens your eyes to the causes of violence and frustration in any inner city.

The brothers have cited Scorsese's "Goodfellas" as a major influence, and it shows from frame one. It's the late 1970s when five-year-old Caine sees his drug dealer father shoot a man in their living room. In voice-over narration, Caine notes, "It wouldn't be the last."

1993 — Caine (Tyrin Turner) has just finished high school. His grandparents, who now raise him, talk about honest jobs and religion, but Caine is already making plenty of cash dealing drugs on the street. When the old man asks Caine if he cares whether he lives or dies, Caine replies honestly, "I really don't know."

It's this attitude that dominates the teenage psyche in "Menace II Society" and makes the film so fascinating. Much more vicious than Caine, O-Dog (Larenz Tate) doesn't care who he smokes — old ladies, kids — and repeatedly watches a videotape in which he shoots a young Korean in a party store robbery.

Caine's role model is Pernell, a big brother figure who gave Caine his first taste of alcohol and guns. The movie shows the vicious cycle when Caine takes Pernell's son Anthony under his wing. Ronnie (Jada Pinkett), the boy's mother, doesn't like it one bit.

Visually, the movie is very accomplished, especially in its effective use of color. Purple, bright pink and green lights glow from various rooms at a house party where Caine, in one continuous shot from behind, wends his way through the front door and eventually into the backyard.

While prominent black actors Bill Duke, Charles S. Dutton and Samuel L. Jackson appear, the movie is populated by newcomers to the big screen. Turner's complex Caine shows a spark of humanity despite the wrong decisions he makes time and time again.

Only Pinkett's single mother Ronnie is one-dimensional and far too perfect in a film that otherwise scores high points for reality.

The movie has essentially the same message as "Boyz," spoken through the male role model that both films see as a key element missing for African-American teenagers. Mr. Butler (Charles S. Dutton), the father of a friend, talks about his son's interest in the Muslim faith. He doesn't personally worship Allah but agrees that it has saved his son from getting mixed up with drugs. "Whatever it takes," he says, as long as it helps you survive.

That same philosophy applies to the directors. The 20-year-old Hughes brothers grew up in Detroit's inner city. Their mother, a woman apparently very much like Ronnie, bought them a video camera to help keep them off the streets.

The movie has been criticized for not offering solutions, but this seems a pretty strong one to me. If you're looking for role models, look no further than the Hughes brothers, who join John Singleton and a growing number of talented young filmmakers making themselves heard in the film industry.

Callers share good and bad experiences

STREET SENSE

BARBARA SCHIFF

These letters are in response to the June 7 column about a woman who reported her recovery from sexual abuse. Even though her first therapist told her she was lying because she wanted the therapist to molest her, she went on to find another therapist, and eventual peace of mind.

Message from Voice Mail:
Barbara,

I read your column June 7 and I really did enjoy it. I had a similar experience. A therapist helped me, too. So, I just wanted to say that I agree with you, that professional help is needed.

Dear Caller,

Thanks for taking the time to add your voice to this important subject. The more we hear from people like you, those who are successful, the more others will think it is possible for them.

Barbara

Barbara,

I read your column of June 7. I, too, had a similar experience, but without the happy ending your caller reports. When I was a teenager, I saw a therapist and told him that my father abused me. The therapist said things to me similar to those your caller reported were said to her. I was horrified to think that I wanted my father, or my therapist, to do all those things to me.

I was confused then, and I am confused now. I am 15 years older but no wiser, or happier. I do not want ever to go to another therapist; I do not want to be more confused than I am already.

Your caller is better because she found a good therapist, but what if the second one was as bad as the first one. She could be worse off than she was before she found any therapist.

My choice is to make it on my own rather than to give someone control over me like the control my father had.

Dear Caller,

It is a sad truth of my profession, and of others, that there are some bad practitioners as well as good ones. Many patients' experiences in therapy are healing, but for some, a bad experience like yours can make them worse.

Theoretically, all of us, including you, can defend ourselves from unintentional or intentional abuse. We do so by taking responsibility for our choice of a therapist, doctor, lawyer or any other person we hire to be our adviser. Thinking people learn to recognize if someone is good for them or not, they do not sheep-like follow anyone.

It is a damning statement for you to say you are "15 years older but no wiser." Do you mean you haven't learned anything in 15 years? Why not?

Going to a therapist is not giving up control of oneself to the therapist. One must be an active participant for counseling to work. In all areas of health, current books on healing emphasize the importance of individual responsibility. Even for treatment of physical problems, always the province of the doctor, progressive thinkers stress the necessity of patient involvement.

In this paradigm, the doctor and patient work together to define a healthy lifestyle. It is based on each person's genetics and inclinations, not on the doctor's prescription. Good psychological therapy reflects the essence of this kind of relationship.

The caller to whom you refer presents such a scenario. She knew her first therapist was bad for her, and she was responsible for not staying with him. Then, she was responsible for finding someone else, who could help her learn.

She is actively involved in her treatment. That is the ideal. It is true, however, that many who enter therapy do so because they are not responsible for themselves. Then, as you express, they are unable also to help themselves.

As I said in the June 7 column, I believe professional help is needed for recovery to take place. Your call confirms that because you say you remain confused. Your choice is to remain as you are rather than learn from your bad experience. I hope, someday, you will be strong enough to try again.

Hope is one thing 'City of Hope' lacks

■ VIDEO

Say you are a decent, hard-working guy trying to make a living and take care of your family with your construction business. There are things you accept — like the phantom workers who only show up on the payroll — just to keep guys with juice at the city and union halls happy, so you can still get contracts and permits.

Does that make you corrupt, or are you just realistically working a system you can't change? What if you have to go a bit further, maybe stopping maintenance at an apartment building which is in the way of new development?

That is the kind of issue director John Sayles considers in "City of Hope," an ironically titled film about corruption and politics in a decaying inner city on the east coast. There is a large cast featuring familiar faces from previous films, some in brief scenes aimed at catching the panorama of a large city and sketching in many of the intertwined relationships. Thanks to the finely tuned script and deft performances, we get a thumbnail sketch.

Among the characters receiving more attention are the harried construction company owner, played by Tony Lo Bianco, and his son, played by Vincent Spano, who abruptly quits his "job." He shows up at the construction site but doesn't work.

Nearly 30, the son is much younger in appearance and behavior, almost stuck in late adolescence. He drinks, does some drugs, gambles and aimlessly hangs out with a bad crowd.

A former African-American college professor, now serving on the city council, finds himself pressured from many sides. Played by Joe Morton, the council member tries to leverage jobs from the largely white politicals. When he visits his constituents, he is attacked by poor inner city blacks as an "Oreo."

Opportunists abound in "City of Hope," with most people not considering any ethical questions about their actions. Morton gradually joins the fold, grabbing an opportunity to get some power by capitalizing on a media circus over an assault complaint. The means don't matter, only the end.

A lot of the scenes are familiar from real life. Citizens refuse to pay more for schools; they already pay too much in taxes and the students receive a poor education.

Sayles, who takes the part of a sleazy garage owner, doesn't offer any answers. He does offer a couple of glimpses of hopeful touches toward the end of a film in which characters seem powerless against their fates.

Locating Huntington's gene becomes a miracle

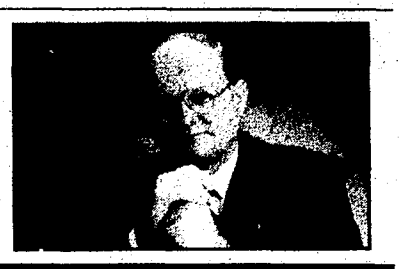
My friends in the religious right, a nickname for those who hold the Bible is scientific as well as religious truth, insist Charles Darwin's theory of evolution is unproven. Not even our nation's space shots have shaken their belief that the stars are embedded in a firmament (Genesis 1: 6-8 and 14-17) rather than drifting in deep space.

Darwin demonstrated that evolution indeed occurred, but he didn't know how. That step was taken by a Catholic priest in Austria named Gregor Mendel (1822-84). Working in a cloister garden, Mendel gave us the idea of genes, teensy-weensy units of heredity. Darwin died (1882) without learning of Mendel's work.

Tom Rice operates the Gitfiddler shop on Northville's Main Street. I met him when I acquired my banjo.



TIM RICHARD

Each summer he organizes a Folk and Bluegrass Festival with some of the biggest names in the country. It's a benefit for the fight against Huntington's disease.

Rice's sister, Donna Jarski, died in 1974 at 31 of Huntington's disease, an inherited, incurable and fatal disorder of the nervous system that usually strikes people between ages 30 and 50. A folk music hero, Woody Guthrie, died of Huntington's. It affects about 30,000 Americans.

The scary thing about Huntington's is that one person in 12,000 carries the gene, but doesn't know whether it will affect his or her children. Donna's three kids don't know if they're carriers.

The Bluegrass Festival this year will be Sunday, July 25, at Northville's Ford Field. Watch the entertainment pages for times, details and ticket information.

University of Michigan scientists are part of a six-laboratory consortium in the United States, England and Wales doing genetic research. Headline in the current Michigan Alumnus magazine: "Scientists Finally Snare Elusive Huntington's Gene." Out of 100,000 genes in the human body, they spotted the one that causes Huntington's. It was "the most difficult gene hunt yet," said Francis C. Collins, the internationally famed leader of the U-M team.

"It's a great relief," said Rice.

Probable result: Scientists will be able to predict the onset of Huntington's — "we'll be looking into a crystal ball with clarity never before provided," said Collins.

Meanwhile, Time magazine (May 31) reported on the "first attempts to cure a disease by gene therapy." Cure!

It seems they can insert genes into babies to treat genetic diseases, but now they're talking about replacing defective genes with beneficial genes.

Rice is hopeful that within a few years a genetic cure will be found for Huntington's.

There are religious footnotes to this tale. According to the Michigan Alumnus magazine, "Some scientists think that some of the Salem witches may have suffered from Huntington's."

Laurie Jarski, Donna's college student daughter, recalls that the onset of her mother's illness started in her 20s, and that people at first thought Donna was mentally ill. Donna's father died of a similar disorder that people associated with the devil. It was all genetic.

Will this be enough to shake the religious right out of badmouthing Darwin, evolution and genetics and insisting on the scientific status for creationism? Let us pray it does.

If the Bible is unreliable on genetics, it's still a marvelous guide in other areas. I like Exodus 20, St. Matthew 7:12 and St. Luke 10:25-37.

On July 25, join us in Northville to practice Psalm 100: "Make a joyful noise unto the Lord."

'50s high school studies had priorities in order

In the mid-1950s I was a member of the Roswell (New Mexico) High School Marching Band. I played first chair alto saxophone. The only reason I sat in that distinguished seat was because the other two alto players were even worse than I was.

The whole band, for that matter, was pretty bad. Discordant would have been a kind way to describe our sound. But none of us planned musical careers. I had signed up for band because it was either that or phys ed, and my athletic prowess was worse than my musical ability. The same was true for most of my young colleagues. And we got to parade on the football field during home games. It was the 1950s and band was fun.

Then there was the football team. There were basically two types of football players: the bruisers, who were less than academic geniuses but who liked to get out on the field and kick butt, and the BMOCs (that stood for Big Men on Campus).

The bruisers usually had part-time jobs at filling stations and hung out at the drive-in. The BMOCs, in addition to being the star quarterbacks or halfbacks or receivers, were also the class presidents, the leads in the class plays, the presidents of the student council and the homecoming kings (the counterparts to the homecoming queens who were always either cheerleaders or baton twirlers).

After graduation the bruisers dropped out of sight or turned their part-time service station jobs into full-time jobs as mechanics. The BMOCs and the band and chorus members went to college to study engineering, pre-law, teaching, physics, journalism or geography.

High schools were not farm clubs for colleges, which were not farm clubs for NFL and NBA teams. And band and chorus were not activities whose primary function was to win awards for the schools and provide scholarships for the participants. Not then anyway.

JACK GLADDEN

It was the 1950s and those extracurricular activities were just fun.

I didn't know anyone who graduated with a football scholarship and the only one I knew who got a band scholarship was — ultimate irony — me! (I forfeited it after a couple of weeks in college when I dropped out of band.)

There were no groups calling for a "return to basics" in the curriculum. Our curriculum was already pretty basic. There were drama clubs but no drama classes. School plays were directed by teachers who coached the drama clubs on their own time.

The school paper was put out by students working after school with a teacher-adviser working on her own time. There were no journalism classes.

There were no full-time counselors, no reading specialists, no social workers or media specialists, no crisis intervention programs.

No sex education programs and no concerned citizens groups demanding that the sex education programs be stopped.

There were no band parent organizations. No athletic boosters. No parent committees drumming up support for school millage votes. There were no superintendents threatening to shut down all extracurricular activities if voters didn't approve a tax increase and no school board candidates threatening to hold their breath and turn blue if the superintendent didn't resign.

There was no teachers union urging voters to approve higher taxes to keep school programs intact but refusing to make any concessions themselves to achieve the same purpose. Teachers didn't make a lot of money, but it was enough, and they enjoyed their jobs.

Students who wanted to learn got a decent education. Those who didn't care fell through the cracks, and there was no government commission demanding to know how this could have been allowed to happen.

It was the 1950s and everyone involved with the public school system — students, teachers, administrators and parents — seemed to have their priorities pretty much in order. What happened?

CHEF LARRY JANES

Colonies were cooking without handy gadgets

For well over three centuries, Virginia has been famed for its good food and hospitality.

By 1699, when Williamsburg was founded, Virginians were enjoying a bill of fare that was probably unrivaled.

The Tidewater, with its forests and waterways, was a primeval paradise of fish and game.

Domestic farm animals, brought over from England, thrived in the new climate, and so did English vegetables and fruit along with native American corn.

Early cookbooks

If you were a housewife in Virginia, placed handily beside the hearth were sure to be copies of these popular 18th century cookbooks — "The Art of Cookery Made Plain and Easy" by Mrs. Hannah Glasse and "The Complete Housewife" by Mrs. E. Smith.

"The Complete Housewife" was the first published cookbook in colonial America. Mrs. Mary Randolph, in her day reputed to be the best cook in Richmond, authored the first printed Southern cookbook, "The Virginia Housewife," in 1824.

These books included recipes for chowders, fried chicken, spoon bread and corn sticks, pecan pie and Tidewater specialties — Virginia ham and Sally Lunn tea cake.

Ah, what a grand old time they must have had in the kitchens of yesteryear. Nary the sign of a can opener or even a plug for a Cuisinart. Colonial cooks were guided by light from the hearth or the glow of a candle.

Temperatures were deciphered simply by the touch of a finger against the side of a pot. Eggs as fresh as the new day's sun, and cream rising to the top of the milk can, must have been part of a sinfully delicious cake.

Poultry, still warm to the touch from its recent slaughter, filled Dutch ovens while the scent of bay leaves, drying on the mantle, permeated the air.

Simpler times

There were no department stores where blushing brides could register for the latest in cookware and appliances. You simply visited the local blacksmith and bartered for a cast iron fry pan or hand hammered copper bowls.

Those were the days when food was treated with dignity, and people ate to live rather than lived to eat.

Nowadays, we don't even have to venture out to a mall to get what we need for the kitchen. Cookware, cutlery and grain-fed steaks are as close as our phone, a charge card and overnight air freight.

One thing is for certain, I probably would have weighed a lot less back in those days, simply because if you didn't hunt, you didn't eat. Since beef cattle roamed until they were lean and tough, veal and pork were by far the most popular domestic meats in the 18th century. Grain-fed beef didn't become part of the diets of early settlers until the 1890s.

Local game

If you did indeed hunt, you probably went after pigs and wild turkeys. I know for certain that's how the famed Virginia ham got its name.

If you were lucky enough to live near the shore, colonial cooks found that fish and shellfish were plentiful.

So here it is, nearing Independence Day 1993, and as I page through old cookbooks and stories of how it was living in colonial times, I find myself giving thanks for all that I have.

I can't imagine life without my Kitchen Aid, Braun Handi-mixer and non-stick pans. I think not only of the colonists who cooked over an open hearth and produced Thanksgiving dinners beyond belief but also of my grandparents who had to fire up the old Detroit behemoth of a stove with wood chopped from the farm just to be able to cook.

My thoughts are of happier times when an ice cream cone was simply a scoop of fresh fallen snow drizzled with some homemade maple syrup.

I sit here amazed that all I have to do to make dinner is to flick a switch after a walk through an air conditioned market that stocks peppercorns from the Far East and other culinary bounties from all over the world.

But when you think about it, cooking hasn't changed that much throughout the years.

Chefs still struggle to make the perfect, lump-free gravy. We work hard for the money that buys life's little luxuries.

And to end, I leave you with Mrs. Mary Randolph's instructions for melting butter as the first step in making a sauce. She warned "Nothing is done more simple than this process, and nothing so generally done badly."

I'm glad I have a great saucepan, some instant Wondra flour, and a stainless steel whisk that makes the job a breeze, and one Mrs. Randolph would have been proud of. Bon Appetit!

Heritage Desserts

Your family will get a "bang" out of Aunt Kate's Cookies, Louisa May Alcott's Apple Slump and other American heritage desserts on the Fourth of July. Declare your independence from the usual ice cream and cake. Serve a dessert that's truly American.

BY JOAN BORAM
SPECIAL WRITER

Considering that the names given to ice cream flavors these days are not much different from names given to perfumes, desserts with names like "duff," "grunt," "slump," and "flummery" sound like words our mothers wouldn't allow us to use at the table.

But, 100 or more years ago, these were the desserts of the moment. Many of them were based on recipes brought from the old country, especially England.

Duff is pudding originally made with dried fruit and cooked in a double boiler. Grunt, a fruit pudding similar to cobbler, is cooked in a skillet on the stove top, not in the oven. Slump is a New England pudding similar to grunt. Sweetened fruit is topped with a soft biscuit dough and steamed in a covered pan rather than baked. Flummery is stewed and thickened fruit, usually berries, served with cream. The British thicken their flummeries with oats.

Other American heritage desserts like pumpkin pie or Indian pudding, which was based on corn meal, used foods native to the new world. Key lime pie was inspired by the introduction of condensed milk in 1858.

"Many people think of puddings when they think of traditional American desserts," said Marion Lynch, president of the Livonia Historical Society. And there's no question that puddings were a very important dietary staple in America's early days. "For one thing, puddings require long cooking, so they could be put on the back of the fireplace for several hours while the housewife went about her business. When wood stoves were introduced, they could be put on the back of the stove as well."

Puddings are versatile. They're thought of as desserts, but there are hearty main-course puddings as well. Thomas Jefferson served macaroni and cheese pudding at a White House dinner in 1802. Hominy pudding was a popular breakfast item in the South. It was popular with Native Americans, and quickly adopted by the pioneers. It's simply hulled corn — the pioneers removed the hulls by soaking the grains of corn in a weak wood lye. Hominy was often served in place of potatoes. And don't forget that English staple, Yorkshire pudding.

Lynch collects cookbooks of all kinds as well as related items, such as Jell-O molds. In a facsimile edition of the first American cookbook, compiled in 1796 by Amelia Simmons, there are recipes for rice pudding, bread, flour, potato, apple, squash, tapioca and Indian, puddings.

"One of the basic appeals of puddings is that the pioneer housewife could use almost any ingredients she had on hand," said Lynch. "She certainly didn't run down to the store to pick up a box of tapioca."

Four days a week Lynn Kalil lives the life of a mid-19th century farm woman, baking on a wood stove, canning and preserving, tending the kitchen garden, and cooking up a big farm lunch for the "hands" on the Firestone Farm in Greenfield Village in Dearborn.

"We're really like a family," said lead interpreter Kalil, who's been a "temp" in the 19th century for six years. "There's a generational span from seniors to college students. We milk cows and shear the Marino sheep, and run the farm exactly the way Harvey Firestone's family did for 150 years. (The farm was moved brick-by-brick to Greenfield Village from 1982 to 1985.) Often visitors ask us if we really live here, and that makes us happy, because we know we look authentic."

A few years ago, Kalil and others from the farm visited Columbiana, Ohio, the farm's original site, to track down information about the farm. And, of course, they hoped to find recipes.

"We visited a senior citizens' center and there was a woman who had three or four hand-written recipes. She had gotten them from her mother-in-law, whose mother, Aunt Kate, had also been Harvey Firestone's mother!" said Kalil.

Recently, Kalil and her family took a four-day weekend trip to Wisconsin. Did they eat in fine restaurants? No, they were participants in a Civil WAr assemblage, and Kalil cooked over an open campfire.

Low-fat substitutions cut fat quick in quiche

LAURA LETOBAR

Cooking elaborate, heavy meals is usually last on everyone's list of things to do on a hot day. But we still need to eat well. So summer is usually the time when fast, easy-to-prepare recipes are in great demand, For that reason, I've chosen Crustless Vegetable Quiche for this month's recipe makeover. It comes from my mother-in-law, Joan Letobar. She and her family have lived in Livonia for eight years. She is from Westland.

Because high cholesterol runs in the family, she is very conscientious of the amount of fat in the diets of family members. She enthusiastically seeks out new low-fat and fat-free products to try, and loves testing new recipes.

Her husband, Russ, and daughter, Kristie, are always being treated to a variety of new meal ideas. Joan also has many tried and true low-fat dishes she enjoys preparing for her family.

She is very creative when it comes to cooking, and has taught me a great deal. When she prepared this recipe one evening I was amazed at how wonderful it tasted.

This crustless quiche recipe is loaded with vegetables and protein. It is very healthy, and reheats very well making it great for families.

Here ares some hints from Joan: Always use non-stick pans to help eliminate excess fat. Substituting reduced-fat products for high-fat products will greatly reduce the amount of fat in a recipe.

Her "madeover" recipe proves it. By making easy substitutions, we eliminated 8.5 grams of fat per serving, or a total of 67.8 grams of fat for this recipe!

Joan suggests serving Ore-Ida hash brown potato shreds as a side dish. Brown them in a non-stick skillet without any added fat. Be sure to read labels carefully, because some brands are loaded with fat.

This recipe can be made in one 10-inch quiche dish, but it cooks more evenly when done in two 8-inch dishes.

The American Heart Association and the American Cancer Society recommend that we eat five servings of fruits and vegetables daily. Recipes like Joan's quiche are wonderful because they incorporate different food groups into the same recipe.

Pioneer a July 4 tradition, make some heritage desserts

If you're interested in learning more about American Heritage foods, plan to attend the Taste of History at Greenfield Village in Dearborn, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday and Sunday, July 24 and July 25.

The two-day event will feature a sampling of 200 centuries of American cooking. For more information, call 271-1620.

Lynn Kalil, lead interpreter at the Firestone Farm at Greenfield Village, and her staff will be preparing three recipes in the Firestone Farm kitchen.

"They're all authentic 1880s recipes," said Kalil. "One, a White Mountain Cake is from 'The Buckeye Cookbook,' which has recently been reprinted and is available in the gift shop. Another is a lemon-potato pie, and the third is Aunt Kate's molasses cookies, Harvey Firestone's mother's favorite.

"We're not allowed to sell food on the farm, but all three of these desserts will be available in the tasting tents on the grounds."

The original instructions for this syllabub, which dates from 1800, called for the bowl to be filled with warm milk straight from the cow. If desired, 2 cups of white wine can be substituted for the mixture of port and sherry.

SYLLABUB

1¼ cups port
1¼ cups medium-dry sherry
2½ cups milk
½ cup heavy cream, whipped

Pour the port and sherry into a 1¾-quart glass or pottery bowl. The bowl should be about ⅓ full. Stir in the sugar according to taste. Add the milk and stir a little. Leave to stand for about 20 minutes, or until the curd of the milk separates from the wine. Pour the syllabub into individual glasses, spooning the curd on top, and put a spoonful of whipped cream on each serving.

LEMON POTATO PIE

One medium unpeeled boiling potato
One lemon
1 cup sugar
1 cup water
2 pie crusts

Grate one medium unpeeled boiling potato. Grate one lemon, peel and all, saving the juice that runs off. Remove seeds.

Mix potato, lemon, sugar and water. Pour into a pie crust and put top crust in place.

Bake in a hot (about 375 degree) oven until done. At the Firestone Farm they insert a knife to test for doneness.

When it's thick enough to cling to the knife, it's done. Keep in mind that baking wasn't an exact science in the 1880s. The stoves didn't have thermometers, so cooks relied on instinct and experience.

AUNT KATE'S COOKIES

2 cups molasses
1 cup brown sugar
⅔ cup lard or shortening
1 teaspoon ginger
1 teaspoon cinnamon
2 teaspoons baking soda dissolved in 1 cup warm water
2 eggs
6 cups flour

In large bowl, combine brown sugar and lard or shortening. Mix until creamy. Stir in eggs and molasses. Add dry ingredients, alternating with warm water/soda mixture.

Mix until smooth. Drop by teaspoonfuls onto greased baking sheets and bake in a 400 degree oven for about 10 minutes.

GOOSEBERRY FOOL

1 quart ripe gooseberries, strawberries, blackberries, or raspberries
1 cup sugar
1½ cups grated lemon rind
1½ cups heavy cream
½ cup crumbled macaroons

Combine the berries with ¼ cup water in a saucepan. Cook over a low heat until fruit is extremely tender. Remove from heat and work through a sieve to make a smooth puree. While hot, stir in sugar and lemon rind. Set aside to cool. Whip cream until it holds a shape, then fold into the cool fruit puree.

Spoon into a serving bowl, sprinkle with macaroon crumbs, and chill thoroughly. Serves 6.

The author of "Little Women" was so fond of the New England dessert called slump that she named her house in Concord, Mass. "Apple Slump."

LOUISA MAY ALCOTT'S APPLE SLUMP

6 cups apples, pared, cored and sliced
1 cup sugar
1 teaspoon cinnamon
½ cup water
1½ cups sifted all-purpose flour
¼ teaspoon salt
1½ teaspoons baking powder
½ cup milk

Combine apple slices, sugar, cinnamon, and water in a saucepan with a tight-fitting lid. Heat to the boiling point. Sift together flour, salt, and baking powder. Stir in enough milk to make a soft dough.

Drop dough from a tablespoon onto apple mixture. Cover tightly and cook over a low heat for 30 minutes. Serve warm with New England Nutmeg Sauce, or rich cream.

This dessert can be made with various berries as well.

NEW ENGLAND NUTMEG SAUCE

1 cup sugar
1 tablespoon flour
1 cup boiling water
1 tablespoon butter
1 teaspoon nutmeg

Mix together sugar and flour. Stir in boiling water and cook, stirring constantly, until sauce bubbles and thickens slightly. Add butter and simmer gently for 5 minutes. Remove from heat and stir in 1 teaspoon nutmeg. Serve hot.

OHIO PUDDING

4 eggs, well beaten
¼ cup brown sugar
½ cup each mashed cooked sweet potatoes and carrots or squash
1 teaspoon salt
1 cup fine dry bread crumbs
1 quart milk or light cream
1 teaspoon vanilla extract

Combine the beaten eggs with brown sugar, mashed vegetables, salt, crumbs, milk, and vanilla. Pour into a well-greased 2-quart baking dish. Bake in 350 degree oven 1 hour, 15 minutes, or until a silver knife inserted in the center comes out clean. Eat warm with cold pudding sauce, or when partially cool sprinkle with granulated sugar. Makes about 8 servings.

COLD PUDDING SAUCE

¼ pound of butter or margarine (½ cup)
1 to 1½ cups sifted confectioners' sugar
½ cup heavy cream
1 tablespoon lemon juice or 1 teaspoon grated rind

Beat the butter. Add the sugar, cream and lemon and beat.

dessert, we are well on our way to achieving this goal.

I'll bet you didn't know that whole milk, skim milk and evaporated skim milk have the same amount of calcium.

Here are some guidelines for healthy eating from the American Heart Association:

- Brown meats by broiling or cooking in non-stick pans with little or no oil.
- Chill soups, stews and sauces before serving. Lift off congealed fat. Reheat.
- Use water-packed canned fish.
- For sauces and dressings, use low-calorie bases — vinegar, mustard, tomato juice, fat-free bouillon instead of high calorie ones — creams, fats, oils and mayonnaise.
- Thicken soups and sauces with cornstarch or flour dissolved in cold liquid or with pureed vegetables instead of heavy cream.
- Grease pans with non-stick vegetable spray instead of butter or oil.

Soup, bread, old-time favorites

See Larry Janes' Taste Buds column on Taste front.

In 1794, Thomas Jefferson recorded a bumper crop of peanuts at Monticello, thus fitting for this recipe.

CREAM OF PEANUT SOUP

1 medium onion, chopped
2 ribs celery, chopped
¼ cup butter
3 tablespoons flour
2 quarts chicken stock or broth
2 cups smooth peanut butter
1¾ cups light cream
peanuts, chopped for a garnish

Saute the onion and the celery in butter until soft, but not browned.

Stir in the flour until well-blended.

Add the chicken stock, stirring constantly, and bring to a boil.

Remove from the heat and puree in a blender or a processor until smooth.

Add the peanut butter and the cream, stirring to blend thoroughly.

Return to low heat and heat until just hot, but do not boil. Serve, garnished with peanuts.

This soup is also good chilled on a hot summer day. Serves 10-12.

According to tradition, Sally Lunn is named after a young girl who in the 18th century "cried" the sweet yeast bread in the streets of Bath.

SALLY LUNN BREAD

1 cup milk
½ cup shortening
4 cups all-purpose flour, divided
⅓ cup sugar
2 teaspoons salt
2 packages active dry yeast
3 eggs

Preheat oven to 350 degrees 10 minutes before baking begins.

Grease a 10-inch tube or bundt pan.

Heat the milk, shortening and ¼ cup water until very warm, about 120 degrees.

The shortening does not need to melt.

Blend 1⅓ cups flour with the sugar, salt and yeast in a large mixing bowl.

Blend the warm liquids into the flour mixture.

Beat with an electric mixer at medium speed for 2 minutes.

Gradually add ⅔ cup of the flour and mix well. Add the eggs and beat on high speed for 2 minutes.

Add the remaining flour and mix well. The batter will be thick.

Cover and allow to rise until doubled in bulk, about 1 hour. Beat the dough down with a spatula and turn it into the prepared pan.

Cover and allow to rise until it has increased in bulk by ½, about 30 minutes. Place in preheated oven and bake for 45 minutes at 350 degrees.

Run a knife around the edges and turn it onto a plate to cool. Serves about 6.

Yukon Jack competitors well-armed

The 68-year-old woman looked out of place Thursday night, watching the Yukon Jack Arm Wrestling Regional Championships at Mr. Sports bar in Redford Township.

There she was, sitting among men and women half her age, listening to loud music in front of the dance floor where people were holding hands to arm wrestle — not dance.

"I'm used to it, having young folks living at home," said Sue Patton, referring to the music her five children grew up listening to in Fairfax, Va. "It's pretty neat."

Patton also got used to arm wrestling because of her children: Dave and Ray Patton are by far the most popular arm wrestling brothers in the world.

Dave Patton, a 33-year-old engineer, has won a record 33 world titles and three straight Yukon Jack National Arm Wrestling Championships. Ray, a 30-year-old communications technician, has won five world crowns and on this night was the only Patton in the house.

He was trying to qualify for the Yukon Jack Arm Wrestling Championship, which will be held July 23 in San Francisco, Calif.

Mrs. Patton has never arm wrestled competitively but serves on the board of directors for the American Arm Wrestling Association. The Patton home in suburban Washington, D.C., is the site of The Patton Club, where arm wrestlers come from all over the country to train.

The Pattons have trained eight world champions and Sue Patton is in charge of teaching the technique.

"Someone would lose a match and I had to figure out a way to win," she said.

Sue Patton tries to be impartial, but there's no doubt she was cheering on Ray.

"In here," she said, pointing to her heart, "I know who I want to win."

Drawing a crowd

This was the third-straight year Mr. Sports hosted a Yukon Jack Arm Wrestling Regional Championship and the two-day qualifying rounds drew nearly 100 entrants.

Including Kim McNamara, the general manager of Mr. Sports, who was the 1986 Miss Michigan Charm. McNamara was knocked out of the tournament long before last call.

"There's quite a mix of people," McNamara said. "It brings out a lot who do it for fun and a lot who are very serious about it. It's real important to them."

Accomplished arm wrestlers aren't going to make much money (even Dave Patton makes only about $12,000 in a good year). Winners at last week's regional earned $200 and second-place finishers took home $50.

Among those serious about the sport is Andrew "Cobra" Rhodes, a 28-year-old from the East Coast. Cobra is quite a free spirit, telling a visitor his last name is Rhodes, "as in Scholar."

Rhodes, a 13-time world champ, is a travel agent and he books his own flights for tournaments across the world.

"I know 50,000 arm wrestlers throughout the planet and guess whose business card they all get?" said Rhodes, the eventual winner.

Webber played football and baseball at Thurston and probably never thought he'd break an arm like this.

"I wasn't in pain, it just felt like someone came and hit me in the side of the shoulder," Webber said. "Someone came up from behind, looked at it and said my arm was broken. I looked and my arm was all deformed."

The women's division isn't nearly as large as the men's. Lori Claus, a Livonia resident, took part in the competition after signing up last month.

"I was pretty pathetic," Claus said.

Claus's friend Carrie Conrad, also of Livonia, laughed about Claus's feeble attempt.

"Whe she (Claus's opponent) clenched her fist, it was the size of my thigh," Conrad said. "I think it's a neat thing to have. It's a different type of entertainment to an evening. Rather than sports on a screen you can see sports in action."

Swimmer suffers serious injury

BY BRAD EMONS
STAFF WRITER

Family members, friends, teammates and coaches are keeping a close vigil with guarded optimism following a swimming accident involving former Livonia Stevenson High All-Stater Bryan Morrison.

The 19-year-old Morrison, an engineering major at Michigan State who earned a spot this spring in the Big Ten swim championships, is slowly recovering from serious neck, spine and back injuries while vacationing in Europe.

Bryan Morrison

Morrison was injured in a freak diving accident on June 17 off the Mediterranean coast in Nice, France, near Monte Carlo.

French doctors performed surgery to repair a cracked fifth vertebra in Morrison's neck. He also suffered other undisclosed injuries.

"We hope within a week that he'll be back home," said Donna Damboise, Morrison's grandmother. "Everyone in the Livonia churches has been praying for Bryan and I think it's been helping. No, let me say this, I know it's been helping."

Mrs. Damboise was originally told that her grandson had suffered paralysis from the chest down, but in subsequent days he has slowly regained feeling in portions of his arms, legs and feet.

Morrison, recently joined in France by his parents, Jay and Bonnie, is scheduled to be transported this week on a medical flight routed through Paris and London. He is expected to be flown to the University of Michigan's Rehabilitation Center.

"It's such a long and arduous flight, they're concerned about that," Mrs. Damboise said. "It's going to be a long haul. The language barrier has also been difficult, but the prognosis for recovery for Bryan, I've been told, is six months. We can't wait for him to get back."

Earlier this month, Morrison and Matt Purdy of West Bloomfield traveled to Germany where they visited fellow freshman Chris-Carol Bremer. The three were freshman teammates on MSU's swim team.

The two watched Bremer compete in the German Nationals in Berlin. (Bremer finished ninth in the 200-meter butterfly at 1992 Summer Olympics in Barcelona, Spain.)

After a week-long visit with Bremer, Morrison and Purdy went on to make stops in Amsterdam, Paris and Barcelona.

Purdy was on the beach when Morrison was injured. He helped administer CPR to his friend before emergency crews arrived on the scene.

"Things have been pretty rough, the whole week has been a blur," said Purdy, who returned home a few days after the accident. "But things are looking up and I understand Bryan is continually getting better. He's eating solid foods. He's a fighter and if he walks, I know he'll swim again."

Greg Phill, who coached Morrison in the AAU club ranks, as well as at Stevenson, is also encouraged by the recent news.

"The message from Bryan was to 'Expect me to be swimming again for you again in a year,' " Phill said. "I'm optimistic. Things are looking good."

At Stevenson, Morrison took fifth in the 500-yard freestyle and seventh in the 200-yard freestyle at the 1992 state Class A Championships. He also finished 24th at the Junior Nationals in both events.

"I'm always thinking of him and I pray to God he's OK," Stevenson coach Doug Buckler said. "It really shook me up.

"Bryan is one of the nicest kids and hardest workers I've ever had. If anyone can make it through rehab, it's Bryan."

Michigan State coach Richard Bader has also expressed his concern.

"At one time we were all thinking the worst, but praying for the best," Bader said. "He's just a great kid and you hate to have this happen to anybody.

"He not only has potential as an athlete, but as a person, too. He did very well this year for us on the team, as well as in school.

"He's quiet, but strong in his own way. He's his own person. Everyone enjoys him tremendously and I enjoy having him around.

"Both the Michigan State men's and women's teams support him and we'll be there for him when he returns."

Rutherford stars at Tiger Stadium

BY BRAD EMONS
STAFF WRITER

Mark Rutherford didn't mind a kiss from his older sister Lynne following his performance Thursday at Tiger Stadium.

The pitcher/infielder from Livonia Churchill had quite a day at the 12th annual Michigan High School Baseball Coaches Association East-West All-Star Game.

Rutherford was voted East team most valuable player despite a 7-6 loss in 10 innings to the West squad. (Grand Ledge's Pat O'Keefe was the West MVP.)

The only four-year starter ever to play at Churchill High School, Rutherford made his first trip to the old ballpark a memorable one.

Among his contributions, he:

- Drew walks in his first two trips to the plate, including one after falling behind 0-and-2 in the count against Michigan's Mr. Baseball, right-handed fireballer Jason Middlebrook, who is headed for Stanford after recently turning down a $300,000 offer from the New York Mets.
- Made a diving stab of a piercing line drive off the bat of Tom Horny (Saginaw Nouvel), turning it into a double play in the third inning.
- Came through with a clutch two-run single in the seventh inning to knot the game at 5-5.
- Protecting a 6-5 lead, did not allow a hit in his three-inning stint and was within one out of becoming the winning pitcher in the bottom of the ninth before disaster struck the East squad.

With two outs and the bases empty, the East made three consecutive errors, all routine plays. The West scored a run and won it in the 10th on an RBI single by Ismael Castellon (Lansing Everett) after Steve Uganski (Jenison) reached second on another East outfield error.

Redford Catholic Central's Brian Paluk, who relieved Rutherford in the 10th, was charged with the loss.

"It felt nice out on the mound," Rutherford said. "I was able to hit the spots and things worked out well, then we kind of fell apart.

"But they made some good plays behind me, too."

Five East errors told the story the of the ballgame, but the memory of playing in a major league stadium won't be forgotten for quite sometime.

"The adrenalin was pumping at the start, but you had to realize it was a game," Rutherford said. "You get used to it after awhile. It was a great place to play and a good way to end a high school career."

Plymouth Salem first baseman Charlie Winstel also could brag about his performance.

The lanky left-hander collected a pair of singles, while reaching base safely three times in four trips to the plate. He singled and scored a run in the East's five-run seventh, which helped erase a 5-1 deficit.

"In my mind, Charlie was second in line for MVP," said Salem coach John Gravlin, an East assistant. "He had two base hits, two good pickups and made three great defensive plays."

Winstel completed a key double play in the 10th when he nailed a runner trying to go from first to third on a sacrifice bunt play.

"I was definitely a thrill," said Winstel, who hit .447 for the Rocks this season with 44 hits. "I was kind of nervous to start, but when I first stepped up to the plate, I forgot all that and I just wanted to pop that ball into the overhang (upper deck).

"To walk out of the tunnel was one of the best feelings I've ever had in my baseball life.

"And just being around these players and coaches, the whole experience was great."

Winstel is undecided about his college choice, but Gravlin is convinced his first baseman's best days are ahead of him.

"He's got great hands," said the Salem coach. "His hands are so quick that he can go with the pitch to left field.

"Charlie was our clubhouse leader and he hit better than I expected, even better than he expected. He has excellent instincts. I hope had finds a place to play next year."

The East-West All-Star game also marked the final appearances for several other Observerland players including Birmingham Brother Rice lefty Chris Smolky (Clemson), the East starting pitcher who was roughed up for four runs on four hits in the opening inning; Rochester Adams' Ryan Ward, 0-for-2; Troy's Greg Janus, 0-for-2; Paluk, CC's tall right-hander (0-for-2); and Birmingham-Detroit Country Day's John Heller.

Dropp steps down as Garden City coach

BY STEVE KOWALSKI
STAFF WRITER

Starting next year, Redford Thurston's Emil Majeski will be the dean of baseball coaches in Observerland.

Majeski shared the title for several years with Garden City baseball coach Bob Dropp. But Dropp, who started his high school baseball coaching career along with Majeski in 1966, is leaving first.

Dropp has resigned as baseball coach after compilinga 406-227 overall record, eight league and four district championships in 28 years at Garden City West and Garden City high schools. He will remain Garden City's athletic director.

"Whenever I'd see Emil, we'd ask each other how long we'd coach and I always said, 'One year longer than you, so I can be the oldest coach in Observerland,' " said Dropp, a Westland resident. "First and foremost, I enjoy coaching. But it is time."

BASEBALL

Dropp and Majeski were inducted into the MHSBCA Hall of Fame in 1991. Westland John Glenn coach Norm Hoenes, who has 396 career wins, just finished his 27th year.

"I'm kind of surprised because I thought he'd outlast me," said Majeski, a Livonia resident with a 349-231 career record. "He always said he'd coach one game more than me. He's been a great guy, a real professional. I like his approach to the game. He's low-keyed but worked very hard at getting the job done."

Dropp said it was only a matter of time before he resigned as baseball coach after taking over as Garden City athletic director at the end of the 1990-91 school year.

"You basically live there (at the school, being AD and the baseball coach)," Dropp said. "Athletic director is a constant challenge, a never-ending job. You can put in as much time as you want and you're never ahead of it. But athletics is my career and I don't mind it at all."

Dropp said he considered resigning as baseball coach prior to the 1991 season. But Dropp enjoyed 18 straight winning seasons in baseball from 1971-88 and didn't want to leave after suffering consecutive losing seasons ('89 and '90).

See DROPP, 2C

Dropp's last three teams at Garden City finished 13-8, 18-6 and 20-8, respectively.

"We had a couple losing seasons in a row and in my own mind I wanted to get out at a better time," Dropp said.

Of Dropp's 28 seasons, two of his most memorable came in 1968 and 1983. His '68 team at Garden City West went 19-5 overall, was Tri-River League champion and also won the Les Anders Tournament, featuring several western suburb teams. West didn't have a chance to win a state title in '68 since the state tournament wasn't started until the '71 season.

The '83 team was a merger of the two Garden City schools, East and West, which came to be called Garden City High. The new-name team won a district title in '83 and again in '84.

"'83 was a real tough year because I had to melt it together," Dropp said. "At that point in time, I also coached basketball so I had been through that (blending the basketball team together in the winter), but you had to be very sensitive to issues as coach."

Dropp never coached an all-state player but had two players, first baseman Tom Miner ('80) and pitcher Joe Taraskavage ('83), go on to star at the University of Detroit. Jeremy Krol, an '89 grad, starred at Madonna University.

LaPointe's stint as Canton baseball coach brief

BY DAN O'MEARA
STAFF WRITER

After one season as Plymouth Canton varsity baseball coach, Mark LaPointe has resigned to devote his attention to personal matters.

LaPointe had taken a team that was 9-12 a year ago and turned it around in just one season. The Chiefs won the Western Lakes Activities Association title and finished 22-12.

The success in baseball provided a soothing diversion for LaPointe during a difficult time in his family life while he and his wife went through a divorce, he said.

"Although I'm putting it down because of my personal life, baseball also helped me with my personal difficulties," the 42-year-old LaPointe said.

"It's some thing I knew would come sooner or later, but it was coming sooner than I expected because of things in my personal life. The only regret I have is leaving the kids and not being at the field."

With the high school season over and the Connie Mack summer season getting started, LaPointe said he had to reconsider his role in coaching because of his children — 11-year-old Joseph and 9-year-old Elizabeth.

"Due to the fact my children's family structure is changing, it's necessary to spend more time with them," LaPointe said, adding they would have been apart again last weekend if he had taken the Connie Mack team to Pennsylvania for a tournament.

"The kids would have had to stay with relatives, but they've done enough of that. I could have sent the team to Butler without me and resumed running the team later, but I'm the kind of person who's either going to run it or not run it."

LaPointe indicated the stress of that situation and other things had led him to make his decision.

He submitted his resignation to Plymouth-Canton Athletic Director Paul Cummings on June 18. LaPointe had coached the Connie Mack team for the last five years, but will leave that role to former Canton player Jason Crain.

"It was not something I had planned on," he said. "A number of things had happened.

"I came home and the yard was knee deep in grass. The eaves trough was overflowing with those helicopter things. I looked at my children and I hadn't seem them much at all.

"They're going through a tough time and they need me. Everything had built up and I said 'LaPointe, you don't need to do this anymore. You don't need to prove anything to anyone. You don't need this.'"

LaPointe, who teaches at Central Middle School, had assisted former coach Fred Crissey for 17 years and had been the Canton junior varsity coach for 10 years. He became the varsity coach after Crissey retired following the 1992 season.

"Somebody might say 'You got your big break and now you're getting out?' But I've been with the program for 18 years, so it's not like I'm getting out all of a sudden.

"Circumstances are forcing me to do what I'm doing. It's just the situation and I have no control over it right now."

LaPointe said he will continue to coach at the middle school level if the district has sports in the coming year. He hopes to return to varsity coaching in the future.

Lane refinishing on target

10-PIN ALLEY

AL HARRISON

So that is where our bowling dollars go.

It takes a lot of hard work to give us bowlers our best shot. Maybe someday most lanes will be of the synthetic variety, but only a few of the houses have been able to invest the heavy dollars necessary to convert to the plastics.

The wooden surfaces take quite a beating throughout the year, and the crews that come in to rework the lanes must be highly skilled in making the proper repairs and replacements to the boards.

For the first step in the process, a drum sander is used to remove the old finishes and the oil. That is followed by another machine which is a leveler, run up and down the lanes several times to get all the wood perfectly level every way. Any and all damaged boards are replaced, loose wood is epoxied in place and the lanes are checked and re-checked for the finishing process.

The cross-grain sander is then brought in with several runs using progressively finer grit. At this point, the lanes are perfectly level and ready for the next machine which sands with the grain. After that the lanes get screened in which a screen mesh is used on a rotary buffer to take out the scratches and marks left by the other machines.

Next, the big clean-up. All sawdust must be removed from the lanes and floor, usually by hand, using a tack cloth. Next, the base coat is applied, this is a solid and it binds the wood together and sets up for the final finish.

The topcoat is most commonly a urethane based finish, although there are some other types in use also. The lanes are constantly checked and re-checked during these processes to be of proper level, that there are no loose or faulty boards, and to see to it that all necessary repairs are made.

The entire process takes about five or six days, depending on the number of lanes and the amount of repairs that must be done. As a bowler, when you expect your ball to hook, when you want to bowl to the best of your ability, there is all of this work that takes place in June or July that will affect your shot in September, October and throughout the season.

■ Last Thursday, the men's (CDBA) and ladies (DWBA) associations held their annual awards dinner at the Polish Century Club. The honorees included the all-city teams from both groups.
