MediaOne ups rate by 99 cents

A Media One cable rate increase means monthly bills will be $1.02 more than comparable services offered by newcomer Americast, which entered the Westland market last summer.

MediaOne will impose a 99-cent monthly rate hike on its Westland cable television subscribers on Jan. 1, company officials announced.

The increase will boost monthly bills to $28.97 for 63 channels offered in basic, satellite and mini-tier services.

That means monthly bills will be $1.02 more than comparable services offered by newcomer Americast, which entered the Westland market last summer.

MediaOne Corporate Affairs Manager Maria Holmes attributed the rate hike to an increase in the cost of doing business.

"You're going to see increases," she said. "That's just part of the business."

But the increase seemed to puzzle Americast officials who said few other companies have imposed rate increases in the face of new competition.

"MediaOne has been the exception," Americast spokesman Geoff Potter said.

MediaOne had a stronghold on Westland cable enthusiasts until Americast — offered by Ameritech New Media — emerged as an alternative.

MediaOne has enjoyed a 71 percent penetration of Westland households, but Westland Cable Commission members have said the company's grip is being loosened by Americast.

Potter refused to divulge the number of Westland customers who have begun subscribing to Americast.

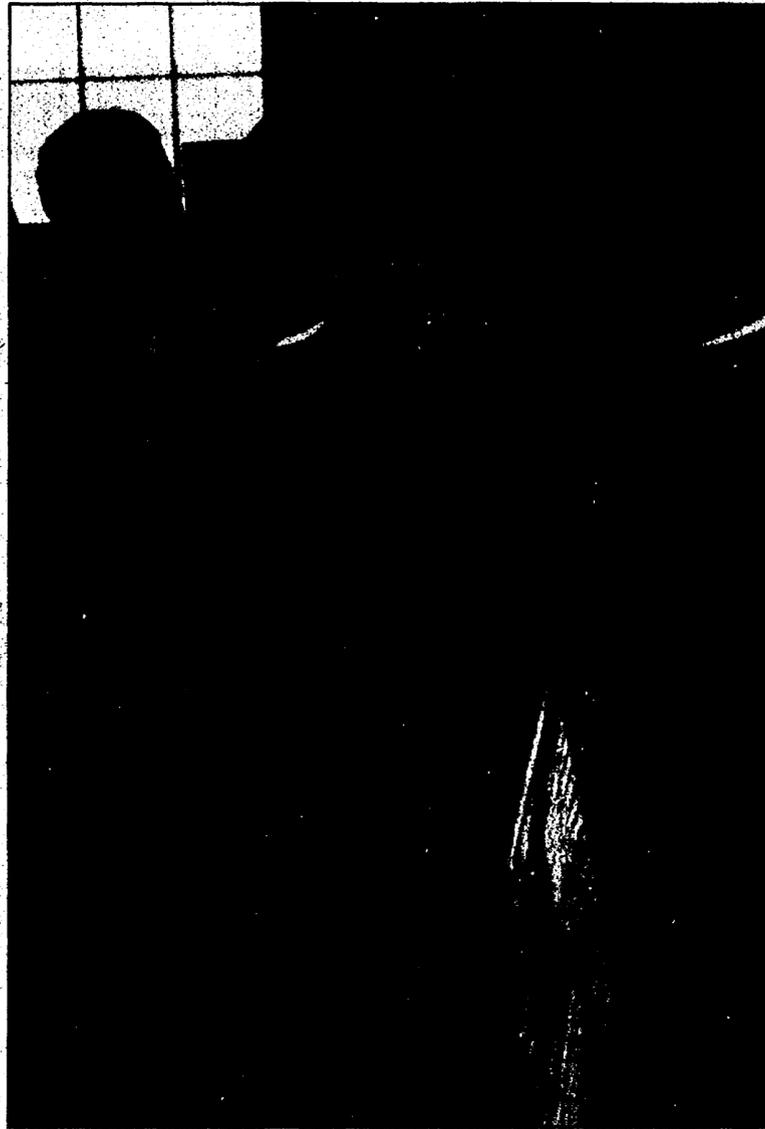

"Due to the competition, we've been very guarded on revealing that information," he said.

Potter would only reveal that Americast has about 150,000 customers across the Midwest.

Compared to MediaOne's new monthly charge of $28.97, Americast will continue to offer 62 channels for $27.95, Potter said.

That rate applies to customers who subscribe to "premiercast" — compara-

A DAY AT Perrinsville

GOING TO CLASS IN HISTORIC STYLE

An old school bell rang from a steeple last week as students shuffled into a one-room Westland schoolhouse for the first time in 61 years.

The start-up of classes inside Perrinsville School marked the culmination of a seven-year restoration effort aimed at reviving a part of this community's history.

Livonia school district students from Garfield Elementary became the first to spend a day inside the once-dilapidated, brick schoolhouse — built in 1856 and last used for classes in 1937.

"I think it's pretty cool," 8-year-old Curtis Rose, a third-grader in teacher Sandy Paldan's class, said as he stood inside the school.

"They have a lot of old things here," Rose said. "They have higher

AMERICA'S THANKSGIVING PARADE

DRUMMERS, DRUMSTICKS, VOLUNTEERS!

Versatile volunteer: Last year Leah Butera was a farmer. This year, she's marching as a toy soldier banner carrier.

BY RENEE SKOGLUND

This Thanksgiving, well before the first light of dawn, some Observer area residents will rise from their warm beds, slip into their warmest long underwear, slap a few bunion pads on their feet and head for downtown Detroit.

These adventurous folks are in the 72nd America's Thanksgiving Parade, the third-largest parade in the country and Michigan's largest public free event. They're part of a cadre of 4,000 volunteers who've worked many hours to transform Woodward Avenue into a storybook wonderland on Thanksgiving morning.

Some will work backstage handling out costumes and applying makeup. Some will inflate the giant balloons. Many will march in costume, and one, 9-year-old Nick Cushman of Redford, will have a grandstand seat.

Cushman was one of four students in the state who submitted winning designs in AT&T Wireless Services' "Calling All Schools" art contest for kindergarten through sixth-grade students. His design of a little boy about to eat a big, big turkey appears on a limited edition of AT&T promotional calling cards.

So, are those few hours of glory worth the sore feet and lack of shut-eye? You bet your drumsticks they are.

Westland represented

"To be in it is 10 times better than watching it," said Leah Butera of Westland, a second-year marcher who has to report to Cobo Hall by 6 a.m. for makeup and cos-

Auction raises funds for ill man Volunteers from page A1

As 28-year-old Livonia bartender Mark Romanchuk battles for his life, his employer and his friends are showing in remarkable ways how much they care for him.

A Wednesday night auction to help Romanchuk with personal expenses raised $25,000 at The Stables, a Middlebelt Road bar and grill where he worked until he began suffering liver and kidney failure several weeks ago.

"My goal was $10,000," Stables owner Ron Abraham said.

Billed as a get-well rally, the auction packed a bar where Romanchuk's sense of humor is sorely missed by friends who fondly call him "Marky Mark."

Westland resident Craig Nizyboriski and longtime girlfriend Janice Suppelsa attended the auction to show support for a jovial bartender and friend.

"We became good friends with him in a short time," Nizyboriski, a Bruce Campbell Dodge car salesman, said. "If there's anything he could do for you, he would do it. He's just a good guy to be around — a fun and happy guy."

Nizyboriski paid $625 Wednesday after becoming the successful bidder on a 32-inch color television, and then gave up the TV to be auctioned again.

"The whole reason we were there was to raise money for Mark," he said. "I wasn't looking to gain anything out of it."

The same television brought in $7,235. It was first given away in a raffle that raised $6,000, but it was returned and auctioned twice, Abraham said.

Tom Osman, a former employer of Romanchuk's, auctioned off a Gordie Howe Red Wings jersey, boxes of cigars, dinner certificates, tanning salon passes, a fruit basket, a Herman Moore Detroit Lions jersey and many other items.

Westborn Market, Chi-chi's and other businesses in the Livonia area donated items. Every dollar earned by the bar and its employees also went to help Romanchuk, who has medical insurance but still has many personal expenses. Employees even gave up their tips.

"Mark is a pretty good guy himself as far as charity goes," Abraham said. "And his personality does a lot for him. He's always in a jolly, good mood. And he would do anything for anybody."

After Romanchuk became ill several weeks ago, Stables employees talked of missing his jokes and his loud singing. When the bar's compact disc player was on, he paced behind the bar singing along with everyone from Matchbox 20 to Donna Summer to the latest swing band.

Since the auction, Abraham has visited Romanchuk at the University of Michigan Hospital, taking him a huge get-well card signed by friends and a videotape made during the auction.

"He was really surprised at the number of people," Abraham said. "He cried."

tumes. She's a toy soldier and banner carrier this year. Step-off time for the parade is 9:15 a.m.

Last year, Butera marched as a farmer. "The little kids thought I was a movie star. The little kids high-five you and want to touch you. The band in front of us was playing music you could be-bop to."

Butera won't get much sleep the night before the parade. She works at her job in Flat Rock until 3:30 a.m. "Last year I was on adrenaline the whole time."

She hopes her energy level holds out this year. She's the designated baker for the family Thanksgiving dinner. "But she's not really worried. 'I have pecan pie in the freezer. I cheated.'"

Professional clown Nanse Simpson of Westland won't be catching many zzz's either. As Dotz the Clown, she'll work the Hob Noble Gobble, a parade fund-raising extravaganza the night before, and most likely party into the wee hours of the morning. Then she'll be up and smiling by 5 Thanksgiving morning ready to entertain the crowds lining the streets for the pre-parade 16th Annual 10K Turkey Trot.

Simpson runs on more than adrenaline during the parade. "It's the smiles. It's awesome. It's almost like a little high."

Bigger and better

'The little kids high-five you and want to touch you.'

Leah Butera

Susie Gross, president of The Parade Company, said the parade's 10 new floats represents the largest number ever to debut in one year. "This is the largest, most sensational parade our organization has ever created. Staging this giant-sized spectacle would not be possible without the tremendous support from the city, our volunteers and the corporate community, year after year."

"With more than 75 units and 6,000 participants in front of and behind the scenes, the parade is getting bigger and better each year."

Jane DeFelice, the parade's director of volunteer services, said three-quarters of the volunteers return each year. "Some have been doing this since 1982. Of course, as their children grow, they join also. They bring family and friends."

Annie Nickert, a parade volunteer from Canton, summed up what the parade means to her. "This is the beginning of the holiday season. When the parade starts, the holidays begin."

ble to MediaOne's basic, satellite and mini-tier services.

Both companies charge extra for other services such as pay-per-view movies.

Potter dismissed any speculation that Americast might soon follow MediaOne in imposing a cable rate increase.

"It's highly unlikely that we'd raise the rates there (in Westland) anytime soon," he said.

Americast is nearing the completion of its Westland system, Potter said.

"We've been received enthusiastically by the people in Westland who have long been denied a choice in cable TV," he said.

MEDIAONE

MediaOne, announcing its 99-cent rate hike, pledged in a press release that it is trying to keep prices "as low as possible in order to continue offering excellent value for consumers."

MediaOne officials said the company still expects to spend about $190 a customer in 1999 — or half of revenues from basic cable service — to upgrade its systems.

Moreover, MediaOne expects to complete construction of its fiber-optic Interactive Broadband Network by the end of 2000.

"By reinvesting our revenue in these uniquely powerful networks, our customers will benefit from further improvements in picture quality, reliability and network capability," Holmes said.

"And as work on the network progresses," she added, "we are also adding unique new services such as high-speed Internet access and digital TV."

Still, MediaOne continues to lose favor with some Westland Cable Commission members and cable subscribers who believe that Americast is offering better services for less money.

Cable Commissioner David Moranty, an Americast subscriber, predicted in August that a cable television "price war" would erupt in Westland, "and the customer isn't going to be hurting."

Coin-operated car wash planned

Residents near Newburgh and Palmer roads will soon find it more convenient to keep their cars clean.

Westland City Council members Monday approved a coin-operated car wash for the northwest corner of the intersection. Councilman Richard LeBlanc had voiced some concerns about traffic volume, but city planners said the car wash will be able to accommodate about 30 cars.

Council members Monday approved a special land use proposal and a site plan that will allow developers to move ahead with the project.

The car wash will be built in a neighborhood that includes a mini-storage warehouse facility, a small commercial strip center and single-family homes.

The car wash will be a 24-hour business.

books reprinted from the 1800s to teach her 26 third-graders on Thursday. Girls donned pinafores and boys wore suspenders - clothing provided at the school - as they sat in pairs at their desks.

"Two people get to sit at one desk, and at the other school we don't," 8-year-old Chanelle Sams said. "We get to wear these old clothes, and there aren't so many kids around this school."

Even the teacher learned what it was like to be a late-1800s educator as she taught at Perrinsville, on Warren Road east of Venoy.

"These elementary spelling books have no pictures, and the students back then learned 48 new words a week," she said. "We only have 18 new words a week in our spelling books, but my students have to write more than the students did back then."

Historic touches

History loomed at every turn inside the school. Old black-and-white pictures of the Perrinsville site hung in frames on a back wall, not far from a potbelly stove used for decorative purposes. A weathered photograph of George Washington adorned a front wall, near a specially made 1890 U.S. flag that has only 45 stars.

"I believe this is the best way to learn what school was like 100 years ago," Paldan said.

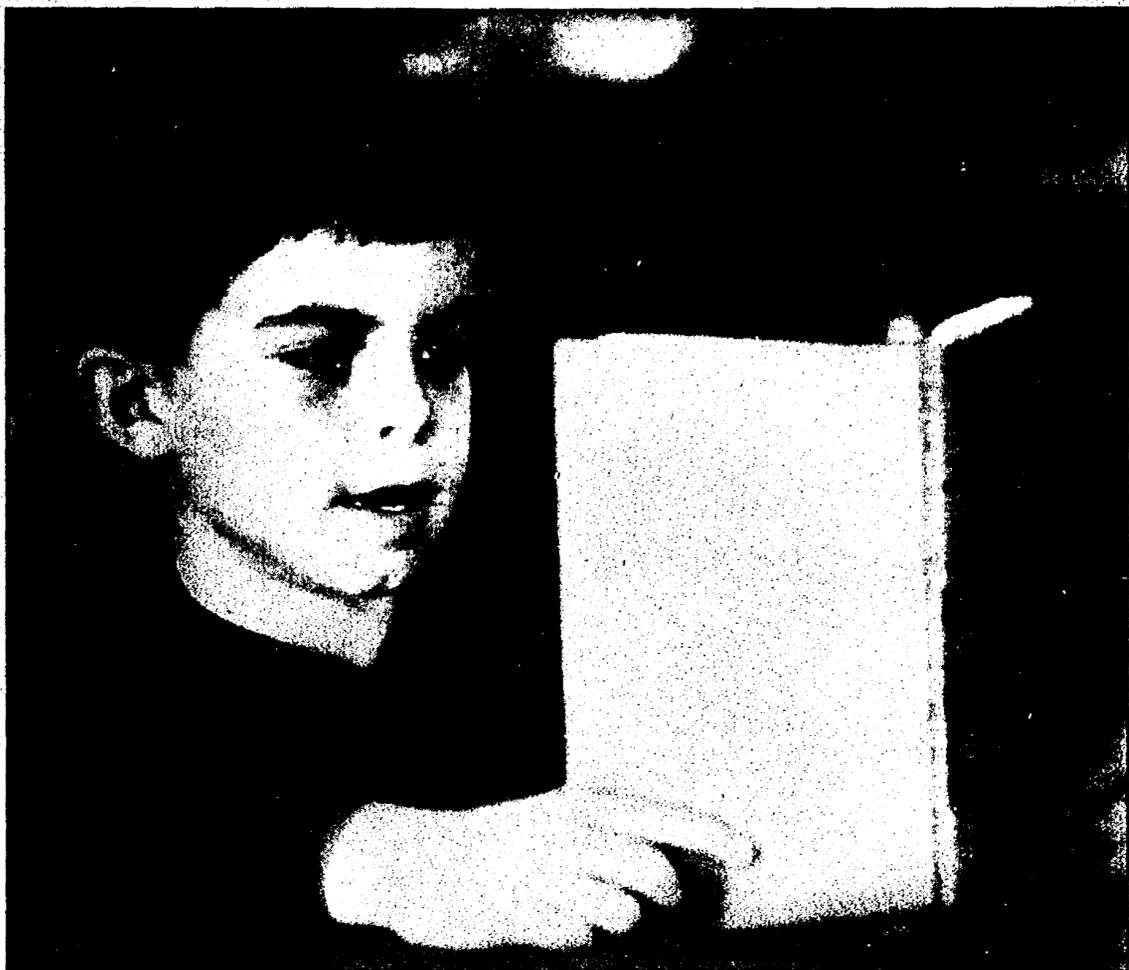

Her students prepared for their one-day trip to Perrinsville by pretending to be from families that migrated from New York along Lake Erie to southeast Michigan.

"These are all farm kids," Paldan said, smiling.

Early Thursday, Westland Historical Commission chairwoman Jo Johnson, her husband, Ernie, and retired schoolteacher Georgia McDaniel arrived at Perrinsville to make sure the school was ready for Paldan's class.

"We rang the school bell when the bus came," Jo Johnson said.

Paldan taught her students in subjects ranging from arithmetic recitation to geography to elocution, or public speaking.

Reading reader: Curtis Rose, 8, reads the reprinted 1800s Harper's Reader. Top left, the school and marker.

She received manuals before the visit to help her plan her lessons.

"This is an incredible experience," Paldan, a member of the Salem Historical Society, said.

Students visiting Perrinsville also learn about the games and songs that children enjoyed in the past, but historical commissioners are still looking for some pieces to complete their schoolhouse puzzle. They need an 1890s dictionary and world globe, Johnson said.

Historians, volunteers and the city of Westland led the charge to restore Perrinsville - a registered historic site - by seeking grants and using money from a variety of sources. They even sold bricks for an outdoor walkway and allowed buyers to have their names engraved.

It adds up

James Gilbert, Westland community development director, said costs and volunteer labor amounted to about $400,000.

Each visiting student pays a $3 fee to help cover maintenance costs.

"An old building like this always needs work," Johnson said.

Students and teachers, alike, seemed impressed as Perrinsville made history by becoming Westland's newest - yet oldest - school in use.

Said Paldan: "This school is really impressive."

For more information about visits to Perrinsville, call the Westland Historical Museum at (734) 326-1110 or Georgia McDaniel, a historical commission member, at (734) 427-2208.

Man, dog suffer injuries in Rottweiler attack

BY DARRELL CLEM

A nearly 100-pound Rottweiler jumped a fence and mauled a Westland man Thursday as he rescued his own dog, a part-hound, from attack, police said.

Westland police officers shot the Rottweiler to stop the attack as the victim, clutching his hound in his arms, lay bleeding on the ground.

"They had to kill the Rottweiler," police Lt. Marc Stobbe said.

Westland paramedics rushed the 35-year-old victim to a hospital, and his injured dog was taken to the Michigan Humane Society for treatment.

Reunited, the two were recovering Friday at their home on Newaygo, near Venoy and Palmer.

"They're both going to be fine," the man's sister said by telephone.

The incident occurred around noon Thursday when two Rottweilers jumped a fence and one began attacking the hound, police said.

"The Rottweiler got upset and started attacking the hound dog and biting him," Stobbe said.

The Rottweiler then turned on the hound's owner when he came to its rescue, police said.

In a report, police officer

The incident occurred around noon Thursday when two Rottweilers jumped a fence.

Skender Gocaj said the hound's owner was on his back on the ground, cradling his dog in his arms when police arrived.

A police report said the victim has an ongoing medical condition that limits his use of his legs.

"The victim repeatedly asked for help and told us the Rottweilers were vicious and had attacked him and his dog," Gocaj wrote.

Without being provoked, the one Rottweiler then resumed his attack, and "the victim was screaming for help as he was being mauled," Gocaj said.

"I was in fear for my safety and the victim's," he wrote.

Gocaj fired two shots from a 9mm gun, saying he feared the Rottweiler would otherwise kill the victim.

The Rottweiler again approached the victim "in an aggressive manner," prompting Gocaj to fire three more shots until the dog backed away, a police report said.

As neighborhood witnesses began dragging the victim out of the yard toward an arriving medical rescue vehicle, the victim asked officers to let his hound inside his house, Gocaj wrote.

Another officer, Matthew Bobby, wrote in his report that the victim's face and arms were "covered in blood" and that he was "bleeding profusely" from his injured nose.

His hound suffered injuries above his left eye, his neck and his left rear leg, and his right eye was "severely damaged," a police report said.

Neighbors told officers that they had tried unsuccessfully to lure the attacking Rottweiler away from the man and his hound.

Officer Bobby eventually fired a fatal shotgun blast at the Rottweiler, who was suffering from injuries caused by the earlier gunshots, a police report said. The dog was taken to the Michigan Humane Society.

Meanwhile, the second Rottweiler had gotten loose but was seen near Jefferson Elementary School, where a group of children were playing, a police report said.

The dog was captured and taken to the Humane Society until a hearing can be held to determine its fate.

Fire closes business for months

A leaking propane tank touched off a small, fiery explosion early Monday at a Westland business, shutting it down for an estimated two months.

The explosion occurred at 4:55 a.m. at American Power Wash Inc., 1261 S. Wayne Road, Assistant Fire Chief Patrick Harder said.

The explosion erupted when a parked truck's propane tank leaked gas that spread to the pilot light of a gas-powered water heater, Harder said.

No one was injured. No one was inside the business when the fire and explosion erupted inside a garage, he said.

"A small explosion buckled the bottom panel of an overhead door and a subsequent force blew out a front window," he said.

The parked truck held power-washing equipment used for cleaning buildings, Harder said.

"Most of the damage was contained to the garage area, and the truck was pretty much destroyed," he said. "There really wasn't any structural damage to the building, mostly just some smoke damage."

Harder estimated the damage at $80,000.

American Power Wash officials issued a press release saying the company expects to be closed for several weeks.

"The good news is, no one was in the building at the time of the fire," the statement said.

"The bad news is, American Power Wash Inc. will be closed for at least two months while repairs are made on the building."

The press release noted that employees who started arriving for work Monday morning were "greeted by fire trucks and what was left of their building."

American Power Wash is urging customers who need to contact the company to call (734) 722-7276.

Auldene (Sandy) Sanders of Westland used a bit of humor to captivate four judges into naming her Ms Senior American House for 1999.

Runners-up in the pageant which took place Wednesday at Livonia's American House, 14265 Middlebelt, are Anne Knott, 81, also of Westland, and Muriel Foster, 82, of Lincoln Park.

Donna Gruenwald, 71, of Livonia and Sophie Plonka, 84, of Dearborn Heights also were finalists in the pageant. All five women live in American House retirement residences in their community.

During the two-hour pageant, the five women clad in evening dresses and red sashes stood on the stage before an audience of 200 and answered questions posed by Ike Engelbaum, master of ceremonies.

It was during the question-and-answer session that Sanders sparked with her sense of humor.

"How do you keep yourself active in life?" Engelbaum asked. Sanders, 80, didn't hesitate. "I do more things than two people would do. I rake leaves and mow the grass. Now, wait a minute, that's a story. I don't mow the grass."

Sanders called herself a "lady of leisure" who didn't have to wash dishes or change the sheets at her American House residence on Venoy Road.

Even so, she offered two practical tips for seniors who move into the 17 retirement residences operated by American House in southeast Michigan.

"Make your bed; don't leave it for the maids," she said. "And don't leave things in your pockets, because you know what happens when the clothes gets to the laundry and into the washing machine."

Sanders, a native of Tennessee, raised four children alone after her husband, Andy, died unexpectedly at age 40. She worked as a pediatric nurse's aide, and in her spare time volunteered to work with battered women through a social services agency.

"I've been a caregiver all my life, helping others," she said. "I'm fortunate to have touched the lives of so many people."

After being named pageant winner, Sanders took the seat of honor on the stage, between the four other contestants, and wore the crown of honor presented to her by Engelbaum. She then was photographed and embraced by audience members and American House employees.

Knott, who lives in the American House residence on Joy Road in Westland, is a veteran volunteer who over the years has worked with the Boy Scouts, the Red Cross, St. Peter & Paul Altar Society, St. Francis Guild and the Orchard Lake Seminary Auxiliary.

Gruenwald, a 34-year employee of General Motors, lives at the American House residence on Middlebelt in Livonia with her 14-year-old dog, Kellee.

Speaking from the decorated stage-walkway, master of ceremonies Engelbaum called the pageant a "celebration of life" and described the five contenders as all having "inner beauty."

The four judges were JoAnn Doederlein, liaison representative for Spectrum Home Care; Jean Frazier, first runner-up in the 1987-88 Ms. Senior of Michigan pageant; Jane Gibson, home health aide for Prime Care Services; and Livonia Mayor Jack Kirksey.

Engelbaum, who was born in Romania, is the owner of a drug-store chain and hosts a weekly radio program, "Looking at the Bright Side of Aging."

The five finalists were nominated by residents of the American House in which they reside.

"While the contestants no longer possess youthful looks, we find beauty in their spirit and liveliness," said Robert Gillette, president of American House Inc.

Granholt discusses need for campaign finance reform

BY LEONARD POGER

Jennifer Granholm, who will be Michigan's first new attorney general in 37 years, gained informal support from two Garden City service clubs on the need to reform election financing and eliminate negative campaigning.

The 39-year-old attorney general-elect, the winner in the Nov. 3 election, addressed a joint meeting of the Garden City Kiwanis and Garden Rotary Clubs Thursday at Amantea's Restaurant, Garden City. Guests were Westland Rotarians.

Four people who commented after the program liked her stand on improving the election process.

Granholm told the 40 people in the audience that "negative campaign ads pollute the process and affect the next generation" of voters.

"My sense is that people are sick of negative ads," she said. "This causes people to be turned off and stay home (on election day)."

The voters hear that the target of a negative campaign ad "is a bum and why should I vote" the candidate, she said.

Granholm, one of the few Democratic winners on a statewide basis Nov. 3, also said there is too much money available for the state political parties to spend on campaign ads. At the same time, the candidates are prohibited by law from having any control over the ads.

She urged her audience to contact their representative in Congress or their U.S. senator about the campaign finance reform proposal pending before Congress.

Richard Hammer Jr., a Garden City district court judge who previously worked in the attorney general's office, said he agrees with Granholm's stand on campaign reforms: Negative campaigning causes people to be frustrated with the electoral process.

"It's time to make changes," he said. "People are getting fed up and are speaking with their vote to say 'I don't like it.'"

Barbara Douglas, a Westland Rotarian and owner of an audiological practice, said she agreed with Granholm's views on campaign reforms.

"Her comments were refreshing," she said. "The whole political science has to be uplifted."

Granholm's talk also impressed Barbara White, a Garden City school board member.

"She answered all the questions asked and gave people an understanding what she wants to do."

Dawn Clenening, a Garden City dental office manager, said she likes Granholm's views on fighting fraud in the managed medical care field.

Granholm's major priorities will be to form a unit to fight high-tech crime, combat insurance fraud as well in the managed health care field, and carry on her predecessor's "legacy" on consumer issues.

On the proposed high-tech unit, Granholm cited two problems. One is child pornography on the Internet. The other is people stealing credit card numbers and customers' names when purchases are made on the Internet.

In the area of consumer protection, Granholm said "The attorney general wants to make sure you're getting what you pay for."

She also cited telemarketing fraud, particularly among senior citizens.

On the lighter side of her talk, Granholm said her father, Victor Granholm, was a Rotarian in the San Francisco area.

"No one's perfect," quipped a Kiwanian, reflecting the good-natured rivalry between the two service groups.

Having won the Nov. 3 election, Granholm will succeed long-time attorney general Frank Kelley. Before her election victory, Granholm was the Wayne County corporation counsel.

Attorney promoted to replace Granholm

Wayne County's deputy corporation counsel has been promoted to corporation counsel to succeed Michigan Attorney General-elect Jennifer Granholm.

Edward Ewell Jr., who has served the past 18 months as a deputy to Granholm, was appointed by County Executive Edward McNamara.

Ewell, 39, worked in the U.S. Attorney's Office as an assistant U.S. Attorney for eight years before he was named the county's deputy corporation counsel in June 1997. A graduate of Wayne State University Law School in 1985, he served as a clerk for U.S. Court of Appeals Judge Damon Keith.

In a prepared statement, McNamara said, "Ed Ewell has proven himself to be an accomplished attorney and able administrator. His experience with the U.S. Attorney's Office and the city of Detroit and as a deputy corporation counsel has prepared him well to take over this challenging position."

Succeeding Ewell as deputy counsel is William Wolfson, 40, who has been a principal attorney in the corporation counsel office since June.

Wolfson also has served as a special assistant corporation counsel/legislative liaison with the city of Detroit for 12 years. He is a 1983 graduate of the University of Minnesota Law School.

Entrepreneurs can learn about exporting goods

Firms seriously considering entering the international marketplace can receive comprehensive training and customized assistance on exporting in a Schoolcraft College program, beginning Jan. 7 and ending April 1.

The program, co-sponsored by the U.S. Export Assistance Center in Detroit and Madonna University, is part of the federal initiative to help small businesses export their products and services. It will be presented in four daylong sessions examining the international market; rules, regulations and cultural issues; trade finance; and international logistics and documentation.

Speakers will include bankers, freight forwarders and trade specialists.

Participants will end the sessions having developed an international market entry strategy that defines their optimum potential market and identifies the best techniques for penetrating that market.

Applicant firms must have been in operation for at least a year, must complete a detailed questionnaire and have an interview. Those accepted will be asked to pay a $500 earnest fee, with a $250 rebate upon program completion. They also will be asked to commit to implementing their international business plan.

For information or an application, contact the Schoolcraft College Export Resource Center at (734) 462-4438. The deadline for application is Dec. 21.

Completed forms should be faxed to the U.S. Export Assistance Center at (313) 226-3657

Roperti's plumps up turkeys for the holidays

BY MARIE CHESTNEY
STAFF WRITER
mchestney@ee.homecomm.net

Five thousand turkeys who have enjoyed the good life since August on a Livonia farm are about to discover what the holidays are all about to many people.

For weeks now, the phones have been ringing off the hook at Roperti's Turkey Farm, 34700 Five Mile. The callers all have one thought in mind: to order the biggest, plumpest, best-tasting turkey ever served for their Thanksgiving and Christmas dinners.

And Christine Roperti-Bates, a 1963 graduate of Bentley High School, aims to oblige. For years now, her main mission in life has been to give tender, loving care to the little 8-week-old Wilford Whites after they arrive in Livonia in August from their birth barn in Zeeland, Michigan.

From August until November or December (depending on whether they're destined for the Thanksgiving or Christmas table), she fattens them all up with mountains of corn, wheat, oats and mash.

She lets them roam wherever curiosity and the quest for turkey niblets takes them over her five fenced-in acres on Five Mile.

In and out of the barn and cornfield they toddle (and gobble), enjoying the free and easy life in the big city.

Well, for those hefty, big-breasted, pink-and-white fluffs of feathers, the ax is about to fall (or more precisely, a zap of electricity is about to hit.)

The Sunday before Thanksgiving, a big work crew gathers at 6 a.m. in the production area of the barn. The Thanksgiving turkeys are herded into the barn, and the end begins for the gobblers.

In 1948, Tom Roperti sold the cows and bought turkeys. "We started out with 50, then 100, then 500, then 1,500," Roperti-Bates said.

Father and daughter spent many hours together over the years, mending fences, plowing, planting corn and driving the farm equipment.

Now, 50 years later, the Roperti farm is still going strong. When Tom and Mary Roperti died in 1988, Roperti-Bates took over, and intends to run it with her children and husband, Wesley, well into the next century.

"This was dad's whole world," she said. "Now it's my world. I always wanted to do this."

"I was close to my dad and mom because we worked together, in the fields, planting a big garden, selling veggies, canning food. This is a real rural oasis in a suburban setting. I feel good about continuing his dream of a turkey farm," she said.

"One year he confessed to me. He said he never raised turkeys as big as I did. That was quite a compliment."

The Christmas turkeys get to enjoy life in the big city a little bit longer, until the days just before Christmas, when the production line starts up again.

Once Christmas is over, and the holiday season ends, Roperti-Bates gets to take it easy for the next eight months, before the next turkey cycle begins.

"Most of the year, the farm is in hibernation," she said.

Preparing for winter

County gets ready for the snow with new road salt contracts

BY KEN ABRAMCZYK
STAFF WRITER
kabrancyk@oe.homecomm.net

Wayne County is bracing for a cold, snowy winter.

County commissioners approved a one-year $1.7 million contract Thursday for nearly 45,000 metric tons of road salt with Cargill Inc. of North Olmstead, Ohio. Commissioners also approved a $1.6 million contract with Morton International of Chicago.

Even though Wayne County saved $250,000 in 1997 through the state's extended purchase program, some commissioners were concerned over the lack of minorities and women listed in subcontractors used by Cargill.

Wayne County has 60,000 tons of road salt from last year, but it isn't unusual for county road crews to use 100,000 or 120,000 tons of salt, so the contract extension needed immediate consideration, a county official said.

Commissioner Edna Bell, D-

Detroit, said she wondered whether commissioners should approve the bid if the state companies did not share Wayne County bid requirements in seeking minority or women subcontractors. Commissioner Robert Blackwell, D-Detroit, also shared her concerns.

"The state has never come forward with any degree of diversity," Blackwell said. But Blackwell added, "With an RFP (request for proposal), it would take several months to close (the bidding and contracts)."

With the concerns over the effect of road salt and stormwater runoff into the Rouge River, an alternative has been studied, but calcium magnesium acetate costs about eight to 10 times the cost of salt.

Commissioner George Cushingberry, D-Detroit, suggested commissioners inform Cargill of county ordinances calling for minority and women participation.

Commissioner Kathleen Husk, R-Redford, supported the purchase. "What it allows us to do is purchase salt at a lower rate," Husk said.

House bill backed

County commissioners supported the state House's proposed revision of revenue sharing Thursday in a resolution introduced by Cushingberry. All present supported the resolution, except Commissioner Thaddeus McCotter, R-Livonia, who opposed it, and Commissioner William O'Neil, D-Allen Park, who abstained. Commissioner Bruce Patterson, R-Canton, and Commissioner Bernard Parker, D-Detroit, were absent.

Revenue sharing is money from state sales tax distributed to Michigan cities, villages and townships. State Sen. Glenn Steil, R-Grand Rapids, wants to revise the distribution formula's current dependence on population.

Crews trim trees

Detroit Edison line clearance crews will continue their efforts to keep trees and branches away from power lines in more than 20 communities in November and December.

In November and December, line-clearance crews will continue or begin work in Livonia and Redford Township in Wayne County. Detroit Edison maintains a 10-foot clearance between tree branches and power lines to reduce the potential for power outages and help ensure electric service reliability and safety for customers.

tion and "relative tax effort" to one that combines population, property value and need.

The Republican-controlled Senate in June passed a bill that cuts Detroit's share and gives more to growing suburban cities and townships (SB 1181). The House has passed HB 5989, giving Detroit $82.6 million a year for the next six years.

Cushingberry introduced his resolution because the Senate proposal represented a "significant loss to Wayne County, Detroit and other Wayne County communities."

Husk, R-Redford, also supported the resolution. "I voted to support it after I had heard from legislators in Lansing about the House proposal."

McCotter believed the commission's action was inappropriate and state lawmakers and county commissioners need to remove the politics from the discussion.

"I'd prefer to have (the revenue formula) locked into the Constitution," McCotter said. "There has to be more stability to the formula. They say they are going to lock it in for the next five years, but nothing stops them from going back in and changing it."

McCotter also believes the commission was acting as an arm of Detroit city government. "Nobody was really talking about the ramifications to Wayne County," McCotter said.

LEGAL SENSE
By Mark Slavens, P.C.
Attorney at Law

IT COMES WITH THE TERRITORY
Property owners can be held liable for injuries if the injured party can show that injuries stemmed from the negligence of the owner. To a large extent, the status of the injured person dictates what is owed. For instance, trespassers (individuals who enter someone's property without the consent of the owner) must prove that the owner acted willfully in causing the injury. Licensees (those who are allowed to remain on the property with the consent of the owner) must show that the owner failed to warn of a hidden danger or peril. Finally, business invitees who are invited to enter the property to conduct business must show that the owner knew of, or created, the condition that caused the injury.

An exception to the degree of care due a trespasser is when one has an "attractive nuisance" on one's property. While one has less obligation to maintain a safe environment for people one could not have anticipated being on the premises, the supposition is that, if you have an attractive nuisance that might, for instance, entice a child to a dangerous situation (such as a swimming pool), you are likely to be held to a higher standard of accountability should an injury occur. If you have questions about any kind of personal injury case, phone me at (734) 421-5210 for a free consultation. My office is conveniently located at 10811 Farmington Road.

CHEERS FOR BEER

CHEF JOSEPH STYKE

Feast on Belgian fare hearty ale

It's Thanksgiving - I've gotta buy the turkey, at least a 24-25 pounder. Aunt Mary likes moist stuffing, and grandpa likes it dry as Death Valley, and then there's Cousin Phil with his, "what, no oysters?" Why did I say I would cook the family meal this year? Somebody get me a gun.

Don't get me wrong, I love turkey. I do one on my grill once a month from May to September, but after all those leftovers - turkey soup, turkey salad, turkey hash, turkey croquettes, and let's not forget turkey surprise - I'm done with it for awhile. Sound familiar?

Here's a story, and a suggestion for something different after Thanksgiving when you cry out for red meat.

Friendly gathering

About 11 years ago a small group of us got together the week after Thanksgiving for food, drink and to share funny/horror stories about working on the holiday. The first year was at Marcel's house. Since Marcel is Belgian, Belgian food and ale it was. The feast was a hit, and we decided to have the same meal for the next four years. Everyone put his own twist on it.

Steamed mussels and Beef Carbonade in Belgium are like coney dogs here - you can get them everywhere. Mussels are in season right now, and very tasty. I cooked and served them with a Gueuze Lambic Ale, either Boon or Cantillon.

Lambic is one of the most bizarre beers made. The malt bill is made up of raw wheat and malted barley. The hops are aged for around two years. After the wort is boiled, it is pumped into long, low, wide troughs in the attic of the brewery to cool with the windows left open overnight so the wild airborne yeasts can attack the beer to produce fermentation. The beer is then put into very, very old wooden casks and left to ferment anywhere from two to three years. Gueuze is a blend of young and old Lambic. When blended, another fermentation takes place in the bottle to create a very lively beer. It's earthy, tart, and very dry and sherry like.

Corsendonk was an Augustinian Priory in the 16th century in Turnhout, and they make a wonderful brown ale in the Dubbel style known in Belgium as Pater Noster (Our Father). It's full of malty goodness with a fruity nose and notes of port, raisins and chocolate.

You can find these, and many more Belgian beers at all Merchant's Warehouse stores and Wine Barrel Plus in Livonia.

MUSSELS STEAMED IN GUEUZE

2 1/2 pounds mussels rinsed, scrubbed and the beards pulled off. (Only use the closed mussels, the open ones are dead)

1 small onion, sliced very thin
1 small orange, sliced thin
1/2 stick butter
1/4 cup water
1 1/2 cups Gueuze

In a pot big enough to hold everything, pour in water and beer. Add butter, orange and onion slices, then the mussels. Bring pot to a boil then put on a lid and simmer until the mussels open. Be careful not to cook away all the liquid. Reserve the broth for dipping and discard any mussels that did not open. Serves 4.

BEEF CARBONADE

2 1/2 pounds beef (use good quality stew beef) cut into 1-inch cubes

FURBER FARMS INCORPORATED

Thanksgiving memories

BY KEELY WYGONIK
STAFF WRITER
kwygoni@ec.hometown.com

Holidays are bittersweet. We celebrate our good fortune and mourn the passing of loved ones. Our memories keep them and their stories alive, and the recipes become family legends.

This year, in addition to family and friends, some of us will mourn the loss of a landmark, the J.L. Hudson's Building in downtown Detroit, imploded on Saturday, Oct. 24.

"The big treat was to go downtown to see Santa and have dinner at Hudson's," said Diane Montagano of Plymouth, who shared her Cranberry-Pineapple Frozen Salad recipe from J.L. Hudson's Northland dining room. "There wasn't anything you couldn't buy at Hudson's. Their Christmas windows were phenomenal; it was a treat just to go there. We always went to the Thanksgiving Day parade with my dad and sister Judy. Sometimes it was very cold."

This year Montagano is having dinner with friends, but she's cooked plenty of Thanksgiving dinners, it's still her favorite dinner of the year. "No surprises is what makes a very nice Thanksgiving dinner," said Montagano, who retired last year from Fiegel Elementary School after teaching for 37 years. "Be organized and shop ahead."

Montagano said she can't leave a recipe alone and modified the Cranberry-Pineapple Frozen Salad recipe she got from Hudson's in 1982 (shown at right). "They featured recipes on cards: They were free, and you picked them up when you paid your bill at the restaurant," she said. "It is refreshing served with Thanksgiving dinner. It's easy, cleanses your palate and is made with easily available ingredients. It can be made ahead. It isn't sweet and has a creamy quality."

Some of our fondest memories involve food. Cam Liebold of Farmington Hills will be missing her father at Thanksgiving this year, but she'll be remembering him ... and his stuffing.

"The following is a recipe for stuffing that we have had every Thanksgiving at my parents' house for as long as I can remember, and I am 41," she wrote. "My dad cooked the turkey and made the dressing every year. I don't know where he got this recipe; he may have even made it up himself, as he was a great cook."

"We always had the same menu every Thanksgiving, including this stuffing. On one holiday, about 20 years ago, my dad surprised us all by cooking a duck instead of a turkey. My two sisters and I actually 'cried' because he had broken with tradition and we didn't have the turkey and his dressing!"

"He learned his lesson, and at Christmas and all the Thanksgivings and Christmases thereafter, we always had turkey and his special dressing. And because I've been a vegetarian for 18 years, for those 18 years he always remembered to bake some of the dressing outside of the turkey in a casserole dish for me."

"My dad died unexpectedly this past February at the age of 78. We didn't know it at the time, but Thanksgiving and Christmas 1997 were the last times he made his dressing for us. With heavy hearts this year, my sisters and I will make the stuffing this Thanksgiving, in his memory and honor, and we will remember a very special father as we do."

SAFE FOOD PREPARATION

BY LOIS M. THIELEKX
AND SYLVIA TREITMAN
SPECIAL WRITERS

The National Turkey Federation estimates that 90 percent or 225 million Americans eat more than 45 million turkeys on Thanksgiving Day. That's a lot of turkey to eat and keep safe so no one gets food poisoning. Here are some tips for a safe, happy Thanksgiving.

Turkey

- Buy one pound uncooked turkey per person.
- Do not thaw a frozen turkey at room temperature. There are three safe ways to defrost a turkey. Refrigerator method - Place turkey on a tray to catch drips. Keep turkey in original wrapping. Allow 24 hours defrost time for every 5 pounds of turkey.

Cold water method - Keep turkey in original wrapping or leak-proof bag. Put turkey in large pan and cover with cold tap water. Change water every 30 minutes, replace with fresh cold tap water. Allow 30 minutes per pound to thaw. Cook immediately after thawing.

Microwave method - Follow your microwave oven directions carefully. Cook turkey immediately after thawing.

■ Always roast a turkey at least at 325°F. Anything lower than that is unsafe.

■ Do not partially cook a turkey the day before. Interrupted cooking can actually increase the possibilities of bacterial growth. Cook the turkey completely at one time.

■ If you cook a turkey a day ahead, it must be carved off the bone 20-30 minutes after removal from the oven. A whole cooked turkey is too big and too dense to cool down quickly in the refrigerator.

■ Remove all meat from turkey carcass and refrigerate leftovers including stuffing, mashed potatoes and gravy, within two hours of serving. Two hours is the maximum amount of time food can be left at room temperature.

■ Always use a meat thermometer in the inner thigh to check temperature, 180-185°F is a safe margin.

■ If you use a turkey oven bag, make sure you shake about a tablespoon of flour into the bag so it won't burst and splatter grease all over the oven.

■ Turkeys do not need frequent basting. Basting actually only penetrates about one-eighth inch into the bird.

■ A dry turkey is caused by roasting too long or in too hot an oven. ■ There is no difference in taste between a hen or tom turkey. Taste is generally affected by the age of the turkey - however, most of the turkeys in the market are young.

■ Always wash your hands and all equipment and surfaces with hot soapy water before and after handling the raw turkey.

■ Remove the bag of giblets from the inside of the bird, then rinse and drain turkey before roasting.

■ Trust the pop-up timer if the turkey weighs 15 pounds or less. If the turkey is larger, also use a meat thermometer to ensure the internal temperature is 180-185°F.

Stuffing

■ Do not prestuff a turkey. Putting the stuffing in the night before is really risky.

Please see SAFE, B2

■ Cook stuffing separately (in a casserole dish): the turkey roasts quicker. To cook stuffing, place in casserole dish and cook in 325°F oven with the turkey for approximately 1 hour or until internal stuffing temperature reaches 165°F.

■ If you choose to stuff your turkey, stuff loosely, about 3/4 cup stuffing per pound of turkey. It is absolutely essential to use a thermometer to check the internal temperature of the stuffing as well as the turkey itself. When the stuffing is done, the temperature of the center of the stuffing should be 165°F. The temperature of the turkey should be 180-185°F in thigh before removing it from the oven.

■ Remove stuffing as soon as turkey is cooked — keep it hot at 200°F until ready to serve.

Healthy suggestions

■ Bake the stuffing in a non-stick pan instead of inside the turkey.

■ Use chicken stock instead of butter to make the stuffing moist or to baste the turkey.

■ Make mashed potatoes using skim milk and low-calorie margarine.

■ Make a lower-fat pumpkin pie. A slice of high-fat pumpkin pie takes 21 minutes of jogging or 34 minutes on a bike to burn off.

■ Choose lower-fat white meat over the dark meat.

■ Don't eat the turkey skin.

■ Serve bread sticks instead of biscuits and save 62 calories and 5 grams of fat.

■ Serve several vegetables minus the butter, instead, use a little lemon and herbs to flavor them.

Safe Handling of Turkey Dinners to Go

■ If you are eating within two hours, pick up the food and keep it hot, not just warm. Set the oven temperature high enough to keep the turkey at 140°F or above. Use a meat thermometer to check temperature.

■ Stuffing and hot side dishes must also stay hot.

■ Cover food with foil to keep moist.

■ If you are not eating until later (more than two hours after picking up the food), remove all the stuffing from the turkey and refrigerate. Cut turkey meat off the bone, slice and refrigerate with side dishes. Reheat the turkey thoroughly to 165°F.

■ Buying a refrigerated, full-cooked stuffed turkey is not recommended by the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

Leftovers

■ Divide the leftovers into smaller, shallow dishes to refrigerate or freeze.

■ The maximum amount of time you can store leftover cooked turkey in the refrigerator is 3-4 days. Leftover cooked turkey slices can be frozen for up to 4 months. Leftover cooked turkey with gravy or sauce can be frozen for up to 6 months.

■ Other cooked dishes such as vegetables, can be refrigerated 3-4 days, or frozen up to 1 month.

■ Stuffing and gravy can be refrigerated 1-2 days, or frozen up to 1 month.

■ Cranberry relish can be made ahead and refrigerated for up to 1 week.

■ Pumpkin pie can be refrigerated 3-4 days. Could be frozen up to 2 months, but the quality suffers.

■ Apple pie can be refrigerated 4-5 days, or frozen up to 6 months.

Don't despair, enjoy the day, with family and friends by serving safe, good food. Just stay in control of what you eat.

Twist from page B1

12 small whole shallots, peeled
1 pound Crimini mushrooms
1/2 stick butter
3 to 4 sprigs fresh thyme
2 cloves garlic, minced
4 cups Corsendonk brown ale
2 tablespoons flour
Salt and pepper to taste
Hearty mustard of your choice to taste (optional)

In a pan that can be covered, or a Dutch oven, melt butter over medium heat. Add shallots and sauté 4 minutes. Add mushrooms and beef and cook 5 minutes more, add garlic and thyme, cook 2 more minutes, stirring all the while so nothing sticks.

Add the ale, boil for 1 minute, cover and reduce to a simmer, and cook for 1-1/2 hours until beef is tender. Remove beef, shallots and mushrooms and keep warm.

Place about 1/2 cup of the sauce in a bowl and add the flour and mix very well (no lumps). Add to remaining sauce in the pan, turn up the heat and stir until slightly thickened. Add salt, pepper and mustard, taste, adjust seasonings. Serve sauce over beef with shallots and mushrooms. Serves 4.

Chef's tip: Serve this dish with a nice, crusty French bread.

Carving a turkey doesn't have to cause a panic attack

AP — Carving a turkey in front of your assembled family should not induce a panic attack if you follow these simple steps suggested by Mary Deidre Donovan, cookbook editor at the Culinary Institute of America:

First, take time to make sure that your knife is very sharp. This will make the job much easier and safer. A sharp knife will glide through the meat, and even cut through joints, with much less pressure than a dull one. If necessary take the knife to a butcher shop or machinist who can put a good edge on the blade.

Let the turkey rest on the cutting board approximately 20 minutes.

Be sure to give yourself plenty of room.

Now, to carve your turkey:

1. Remove the drumstick and the thigh in one piece, cutting between the breast and the thigh all the way down to the hip joint.

2. Pull that section away. You will need to grab it with a towel and your hands in order to get through and pop the hip joint out of the socket. You may also have to slightly cut the meat surrounding the joint for easier removal of the leg.

3. Separate the drumstick and the thigh where they meet.

4. Slice the meat off the drumstick and the thigh.

5. Repeat steps 1 through 4 for other drumstick-thigh section.

6. Leave wings on for stability in carving the white meat, to prevent the turkey from rocking back and forth.

7. Start carving the white meat at the back "where the bird goes over the fence last" and work your way to the front, carefully carving around the rib cage.

8. After you remove the wings, your professionally carved bird is ready to be served.

The following recipe is taken from "An American Bounty"

(Rizzoli, 1995), a cookbook inspired by the award-winning, student-staffed American Bounty Restaurant, located on the Culinary Institute's campus in Hyde Park, N.Y.

SAUSAGE AND APPLE STUFFING

6 cups cubed white bread

1 cup hot or mild raw sausage meat, crumbled

6 tablespoons butter

1/2 cup finely diced celery

1/2 cup finely diced onion

1 cup peeled, cored and diced raw apples

1/2 cup chopped walnuts, toasted (see note)

Chicken broth as needed (recipe follows)

2 tablespoons minced fresh parsley

Salt to taste

Freshly ground black pepper to taste

Preheat the oven to 300 F. Place the bread cubes on baking sheets and toast lightly, 10 to 12 minutes. They should be slightly dry, but not browned; transfer to a large mixing bowl.

Sauté the sausage in a skillet over medium heat until the sausage is cooked through, 5 to 6 minutes. Remove the sausage and drain thoroughly on paper towels to remove excess fat.

Return the skillet to medium heat and melt the butter. Add the celery and onion and sauté stirring frequently, until tender.

Combine the sausage, bread cubes, and vegetable mixture.

Add the apples and walnuts, and toss to combine. If the stuffing needs additional moisture, add chicken broth. It should be moist enough to hold together when lightly pressed, but not so wet that it packs tightly. Season with parsley and salt and pepper to taste.

Bake the stuffing in a buttered shallow baking dish, covered with foil, for about 45 minutes in a 350 F oven. Makes about 8 cups.

Note: Toast the nuts in a dry sauté pan or skillet over medium-high heat until a rich aroma is apparent. Transfer to a plate to cool before chopping.

Nutritional information per 1/2 cup serving: 230 cal., 5 g pro., 18 g fat, 13 g carbo., 290 mg sodium, 60 mg chol.

CHICKEN BROTH

4 pounds chicken bones

3 quarts cold water

1 large onion, thinly sliced

1 carrot, thinly sliced

1 stalk celery, thinly sliced

5 to 6 whole black peppercorns

3 to 4 parsley stems

1 bay leaf

1 sprig fresh thyme

Place the chicken bones in a large pot with enough cold water to cover them by 2 inches. Bring the water to a boil over medium heat. As the water comes to a boil, skim any foam that rises to the surface. Adjust the heat to maintain a slow, lazy simmer.

When the broth has simmered for 1 1/2 to 2 hours, add the remaining ingredients. Continue to simmer, skimming the surface as necessary, for another hour.

Strain the broth and let it cool to room temperature; store in the refrigerator for up to 5 days, or in the freezer for up to 3 months. To remove fat from the broth, cool it thoroughly in the refrigerator. The fat will come to the surface and harden and will then be easy to lift off. Makes about 2 quarts.

Consider roast turkey breast for small family gatherings

BY DANA JACOBI
SPECIAL WRITER

Thanksgiving dinner traditionally means a groaning board surrounded by a flock of family and friends. These days, though, with many families too far flung to come together, and single-person households more common than ever, Thanksgiving sometimes needs to be a meal for two to six.

When you want the pomp and pleasure of a traditional feast and the feasters are few in number, roasting a whole turkey breast can be preferable to cooking a small bird. A breast is easier to handle, and you can still present it in golden glory, just as you would the usual bird. And, in keeping with tradition, you will definitely have that sine qua non of Thanksgiving — leftovers.

A breast means lots of white meat. It need not mean sawdust-dry, cardboard-tasting meat. The best way to avoid this is to start with a fresh turkey breast. The freezing process dehydrates a turkey. The defrosting process dries it out even more. Skip these problems by selecting a fresh whole turkey breast from the refrigerated meat case at the supermarket, or ask your butcher to provide one.

While talking about juicy results, I defiantly confess that I have never in my life basted a turkey. Since people rave about how succulent my turkey is, I decided long ago that this procedure is not worth the bother. However, like my mother, I am a staunch advocate of the "begin breast down" school. You do not have to agree, but it works for me.

TURKEY BREAST SERVED WITH CHESTNUT STUFFING

- 5-pound turkey breast
- 1 teaspoon vegetable oil
- 2 3/4 cups chicken broth
- 4 cups Chestnut Stuffing (recipe below)

Preheat the oven to 325 degrees F. Rinse the breast and pat it dry. Rub the breast lightly with the oil, or use cooking spray. Set the breast on a rack in a roasting pan, skin side down. Pour the broth into the bottom of the pan. Roast for 30 minutes. Turn the breast over and cook 30 minutes. Turn the breast upside down again and roast another 30 minutes. To brown the breast, set it skin side up for 15 minutes, or until an instant-read thermometer reads 170 F. when inserted in the thick part away from the bone.

Let the roasted breast sit 20 minutes. Transfer the turkey to a warmed serving platter and carve. Serve with chestnut stuffing.

Each of the six servings contains 399 calories and 7 grams of fat.

CHESTNUT STUFFING

- (Makes 7-8 cups)
- 4 cups herb-seasoned stuffing
- 2 tablespoons olive oil
- 1 celery rib, chopped
- 1 medium leek, white part only, chopped
- 1 medium onion, chopped
- 2 tablespoons chopped shallot
- 2 cups cooked chestnuts.

coarsely chopped (These are sold vacuum packed in jars & plastic pouches, as well as canned)

1/4 teaspoon poultry seasoning

1 cups chicken stock or canned broth

Freshly ground pepper

Place the stuffing in a large bowl. Heat the oil in a medium skillet over medium-high heat. Sauté the celery, leek, onion, and shallot until they soften, about 5 minutes. Add the sautéed vegetables to the dry stuffing. Add the chestnuts and poultry seasoning. Pour in the broth and mix to combine all the ingredients. Season to taste with salt and pepper. Press the stuffing lightly into a greased oven-proof dish and bake at 350 F. covered, for 15 minutes. Uncover and bake 15 minutes longer for fluffy, crusty dressing.

Each 3/4 cup serving of stuffing contains 201 calories and 5 grams of fat.

CRANBERRY-PINEAPPLE FROZEN SALAD

- 1 cup crushed pineapple, drained
- 1 can (8 1/2 ounce) pears, drained and chopped
- 1 can (16 ounce) whole cranberry sauce
- 1 cup pecan chips, chopped
- 1 cup sour cream
- 1 small (8 ounce) container Cool Whip
- 1/2 cup Hellman's Mayonnaise
- 2 teaspoons horseradish

Combine all ingredients well. Turn into a square glass dish. Cover and freeze overnight. Take out of freezer about 1 hour before dinner to soften.

Cut into squares and serve on leaf lettuce. Serves 6-8.

Recipe compliments of Diane Montagano of Plymouth, revised from a 1962 from J.L. Hudson's.

CAMERON'S DRESSING

- (Serves 4 - double for 8, triple for 12, etc.)
- 4 medium sized boiled potatoes
- 16 slices white bread
- 1 cup milk

- 2 cooking onions, chopped
- 2 cups chopped celery
- 1 stick melted butter or margarine
- 4 eggs
- Salt and pepper to taste
- Sage to taste - but at least 3 tablespoons

Cube the boiled potatoes in small cubes and place in a large bowl. In another bowl, cover the slices of bread with the milk. Let them soak for a few minutes, then squeeze out and drain off the milk. Add the bread to the potatoes. Add the celery, chopped onion, and butter. Stir in the eggs. Add the spices, and stir everything together.

Grease 1 or 2 loaf pans or a large casserole with spray-on vegetable oil, and pour in the stuffing. Bake at 375° F. for 20 minutes, then cover with foil and turn the temperature down to about 250°F. Heat for 10 more minutes or so - longer if necessary. It's ok if it gets a little brown and "crunchy" on the top. Serve hot.

Recipe compliments of Cam Liebold of Farmington Hills.

Marilyn Jacobson of Lake Orion and her daughter-in-law fell in love with this dish after one bite. "It's a good dessert snack the next day, it's even good cold," wrote Jacobson.

YAMS WITH APRICOTS

- 2 1/4 pounds (about 6) medium size yams, cooked and peeled, or 3 cans (16 ounces each) sweet potatoes, drained
- 1/4 cup packed light brown sugar (plus 2 tablespoons, reserved)
- 1 tablespoon all purpose flour
- 1/2 teaspoon ground cinnamon
- 1/8 teaspoon salt
- 1 1/2 cups orange juice
- 2 tablespoons butter
- 2 to 3 teaspoons grated orange rind
- 1 cup dried apricots, halved or quartered
- 1/4 cup golden raisins
- 1 cup chopped pecans

Preheat oven to 350°F.

Cut yams or sweet potatoes in half lengthwise and place in a single layer in a 2-quart shallow oven dish.

Combine the 1/4 cup brown sugar, flour, cinnamon and salt in a medium saucepan; stir to mix well. Gradually stir in orange juice until smooth. Bring mixture to boiling over medium heat; cook, stirring constantly, for 1 minute.

Remove from heat; stir in butter, rind, apricots and raisins. Pour mixture over potatoes. Sprinkle with pecans and the 2 tablespoons brown sugar.

Bake in 350°F oven 30 minutes until bubbly. Serve.

Barb Brown of Canton shared this recipe, which has been passed down generation-to-generation on her husband's side of the family.

"Not only is this Cranberry Casserole delicious," she wrote, "but it's a great way to get my three-year-old daughter to eat fresh cranberries."

CRANBERRY CASSEROLE

- 3 cups unpeeled, chopped Macintosh apples, (approximately 5)
- 2 cups raw cranberries
- 1 1/2 cups granulated sugar
- Mix ingredients together and put into a greased casserole dish
- Mix and spread over fruit:
- 1 stick margarine (softened)
- 1/2 cup flour
- 1/2 cup brown sugar
- 1 cup oatmeal
- Sprinkle mixture with pecans (about one cup, chopped)

Bake 1 hour at 350°F, covered. It will be moist, cooked uncovered it will be dry.

Serve plain or with whipped cream or Cool Whip. Michelle Swigart and her family went to Williamsburg, Virginia on a summer vacation 26 years ago and had a traditional meal at the King's Arm Tavern Restaurant.

"We loved all this Peanut Soup so much that we have added to our Thanksgiving menu every year since then," wrote Swigart. "My brother Scott usually has the job of making the King's Arm Tavern Cream of Peanut Soup, but my mom handed over the family copy of the recipe a few years back."

KING'S ARMS TAVERN CREAM OF PEANUT SOUP

- (10-12 servings)
- 1 medium onion, chopped
- 2 ribs celery, chopped
- 1/4 cup butter
- 3 tablespoons all-purpose flour
- 2 quarts chicken stock
- 2 cups smooth peanut butter
- 1 3/4 cups light cream
- Peanuts chopped (for garnish)

Sauté onion and celery in butter until soft, but not brown. Stir in flour until well blended. Add chicken stock, stirring constantly, and bring to a boil. Remove from heat and puree in a food processor or blender.

(We never puree the soup, we like it a little chunky). Add peanut butter and cream, stirring to blend thoroughly. Return to low heat, but do not boil, and serve, garnished with peanuts.

What to do with leftovers? Doris Demrick of Bloomfield Hills shared this delicious recipe for Turkey Tetrazzini (Microwave). "It's one of my family's favorite casseroles," she wrote. "I often cook a small turkey breast just so I will have the leftover turkey to make this delicious dish."

TURKEY TETRAZZINI (MICROWAVE)

- 4 ounces spaghetti, cooked
- 1 can (10 1/2 ounces) cream of mushroom soup
- 1/2 cup milk
- 2 cups chopped turkey
- 1 can (3 ounces) sliced mushrooms (drained)
- 1/3 cup chopped onion
- 2 cups shredded Cheddar Cheese (divided)

Stir in soup with milk and cooked spaghetti. Add rest of ingredients, reserving 1 cup of shredded Cheddar Cheese for top.

Cover and microwave on high for 5 minutes. Stir. Heat another 3 minutes. Sprinkle with remaining 1 cup of cheese, microwave uncovered for 2 minutes.

Use a 9 by 13-inch microwave safe dish. Serves 6.

Hearty vegetarian soup a delicious meal in a bowl

AP - Stanley's Casserole Soup with Caramelized Shallot and Garlic Toast is a thick, hearty soup, a quickly made complete meal in one bowl.

It is one of the choices offered by cookbook author and food columnist Linda Gassenheimer in her book, "Vegetarian Dinner in Minutes" (Chronicle, $16.95). Gassenheimer's earlier book, "Dinner in Minutes," won a James Beard award.

She realized, she says in her latest book's introduction, that most vegetable dishes take a lot of time to prepare and usually get a lot of their flavor from fat.

"When I get home from work, I need quick, delicious, and healthful dinners for my family," she says. "This book meets those demands with simplified buying and cooking techniques."

The book has 75 recipes and 24 color photographs, organized into chapters ranging around the world. The variety includes Greek Pasta with Lemon Vinaigrette Salad; Chiles en Nogada with Pimiento Rice; Black Pepper "Tenderloin" with Sesame Noodles; and Cajun Kabobs with Creole Rice and Red Beans.

This soup from the Modern American Comfort Foods section is named for Stanley, a friend who makes it, and is a shortened version suitable for a midweek dinner, Gassenheimer writes.

"I use shallots for the toast, because they melt away to a paste, leaving a mild onion flavor. The secret is to cook them until they are sweet," she says.

STANLEY'S CASSEROLE SOUP WITH CARAMELIZED SHALLOT AND GARLIC TOAST

- 4 cups vegetable broth
- 4 1/2 cups canned whole tomatoes, including liquid
- 1 pound red potatoes,

- washed and sliced
- 1 medium red onion, sliced (2 cups)
- 2 medium carrots, sliced (1 cup)
- 4 medium celery stalks, sliced (2 cups)
- 2 cups sliced white cabbage
- 4 ounces (2 cups) uncooked fusilli
- 2 tablespoons horseradish
- 2 tablespoons balsamic vinegar
- 5 ounces (4 cups) prewashed spinach
- 4 ounces shredded Swiss cheese
- Salt and freshly ground black pepper to taste

Bring vegetable broth, tomatoes, and potatoes to a boil in a large pot on medium-high heat. Add onion, carrots and celery. Cover, lower heat, and cook on a slow boil 15 minutes. Add cabbage and fusilli. Boil, uncovered, 10 minutes. In a small bowl, mix horseradish and vinegar together. Add to soup along with spinach. Boil 2 minutes. The potatoes and pasta will be cooked and the spinach will be just wilted. Add cheese and salt and pepper to taste. Serve in large soup bowls.

CARAMELIZED SHALLOT AND GARLIC TOAST

- 2 teaspoons olive oil
- 1/2 pound shallots, thinly sliced (2 cups)

- 8 medium cloves garlic, crushed
- 1 cup water
- 2 teaspoons sugar
- 4 thick slices country-style bread

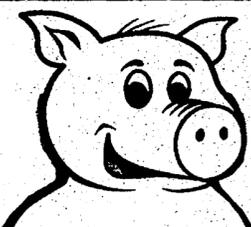

Heat oil in a medium-sized non-stick frying pan over medium heat.

Add shallots and garlic and saute 1 minute. Add water, cover, and saute 15 minutes, until water is evaporated. Add sugar and saute 5 minutes more. The shallots will cook to a spreadable consistency. Spread on bread and toast under broiler 1 to 2 minutes. Makes 4 servings.

Cook's tips: Red or white onions can be used instead of shallots. Be sure to cook them until they are golden and sweet.

Any type of thick country-style bread can be used.

Slice vegetables in a food processor fitted with a thin slicing blade.

Cosmetic surgeon restores hope for Colombian children

SMILING FACES

KIMBERLY A. MORTSON • STAFF WRITER

kmortson@oe.homecomm.net

Plastic and reconstructive surgeon Dr. Michael H. Freedland knows how important it is for his patients to look normal. Many suffer from facial deformities that dramatically effect their personal and professional lives. Freedland, however, says the pressure in the United States to "look ordinary or average" pales in comparison to the shame and disgrace other cultures feel when a child with an abnormality, such as a cleft lip and palate, is born into their family.

"Many of the children are shunned and rejected by their family. They aren't allowed to go to school and don't go out in public. They're virtual prisoners in their homes, and the parents are made to feel like their child has been affected by some kind of voodoo."

Freedland knows first hand the pain and anguish children and families suffer having witnessed hundreds of such cases on trips he's made overseas since 1995 as part of Operation Smile.

Freedland, a Bloomfield Hills resident, performs cosmetic and reconstructive surgery on staff at St. Mary Hospital in Livonia, William Beaumont Hospital, Henry Ford Hospital-Wyandotte and Children's Hospital of Michigan. He also maintains two practices at the Downriver Surgery Center in Wyandotte and the Somerset Medical Group in Troy.

The plastic surgeon says he became interested in volunteering with Operation Smile while completing his fellowship at Eastern Virginia Medical School under the leadership of distinguished plastic surgeon Dr. William McGee Jr.

"I thought it would be a neat thing to do," said Freedland, "and a good way to utilize my skills in a volunteer setting."

Planting seeds

Co-founder McGee and his wife, Kathleen, joined a volunteer medical mission to the Philippines in 1982. When the need arose for a return visit, the McGees coordinated a team of 18 volunteers to provide treatment for 200 children. Thus began Operation Smile (offices in Norfolk, Va.) Over the last 18 years, OS has treated more than 45,000 patients in the United States and abroad.

Freedland's first two trips took place in 1995 when he was a member of a reconstructive surgery team that traveled to Colombia and Vietnam. In 1996 he worked in the Philippines and returned again to Colombia in September 1998.

Not surprisingly, the visits require extensive planning to orchestrate the logistics involved with transporting more than 100 medical and non-medical personnel as well as equipment, donations and bottled water thousands of miles.

"No one person on these trips is any more important than anyone else," said Freedland, "and no one's job is any less significant than another. It requires a total team effort."

On his most recent trip, Freedland served as team leader coordinating a 40-person medical unit, which completed 155 surgeries over a three day weekend. Freedland performed 56 procedures in total - traveling west to Cali from Colombia for an additional four days of surgery with another medical mission team before heading back to his family in the U.S.

Freedland admitted working in Cali was less stressful than his stint as team leader in Colombia. "In Cali I was a worker bee and concentrated on the kids," said Freedland, "but as the team leader in Colombia, I had a lot of distractions, from running out of supplies to meeting the president of the hospital where we were working. It was really important to keep our priorities straight and focus on the kids. That's what makes a trip of this nature so rewarding."

When the doctors treat facial deformities, they reduce patients' psychological grief as well as eliminating physical complications such as difficulty hearing, speech impediments, problems swallowing and delayed tooth development.

Cleft lip, palate

The term "cleft" refers to an opening. An opening in the lip is called cleft lip while an opening in the roof of the mouth (palate) is called cleft palate. The separate parts that form a baby's face and palate come together during early pregnancy. A cleft occurs if the parts do not fuse completely.

One of every 750 children born in the U.S. have the deformity. Overseas, particularly Asian countries, 1 in 500 are affected, Freedland says. That number is 1 in 400 in the Philippines.

"While there is a genetic component to the nature of the deformity, environmental factors seem to impact cases," said Freedland. He noted the rise in incidences of cleft lips and palates in the years after the Chernobyl nuclear power disaster in Ukraine (then part of the Soviet Union). The people of Chernobyl were exposed to radioactive material in the atmosphere for more than 10 days that of which was 100 times greater than the Hiroshima bomb.

Potential candidates

Operation Smile missions draw patients and their families from hundreds of kilometers away in hopes of making the surgery list during the team's brief stay. Freedland said 286 children in need of surgery were evaluated this past mission. Of those, 155 were operated on over a three-day period, based on the priority status of their deformity. The father of two, Freedland said it was particularly hard when the list of surgery candidates was posted and children had to be turned away.

"Emotions runs high for both the families and our medical team members," said Freedland. "You see a lot of angry people after the list goes up, and that has a real impact on all of us. It's important to keep morale up and remember what a significant change we're able to make in a child's life in such a short amount of time."

Restoring smiles: Dr. Michael H. Freedland, a cosmetic and reconstructive surgeon on staff at St. Mary Hospital in Livonia, enjoys the company of a young child in Cali, South America on Operation Smile's 1998 Colombia mission. The child underwent surgery to improve a cleft lip.

Adding to the stress of the trip are the often-primitive and crude working conditions the medical and ancillary staff find themselves having to adapt to. Some of the problems include poor infrastructure to outdated medical equipment, language barriers and a lack of running water.

In hopes of carrying home the message of Operation Smile, Freedland is trying to establish a Detroit-based chapter of OS by securing financial and medical support from Michigan corporations and physicians.

"There is such a need for a Detroit chapter," said Freedland. The doctor would like to see the involvement of Michigan-native celebrities such as Stevie Wonder because they could do much to draw the public's attention to the significance of the missions.

A Detroit chapter would also allow children identified as World Care patients to be brought to Michigan and operated on by metropolitan Detroit physicians, Freedland said. World Care children have extreme deformities that can't be taken care of in the time the Operation Smile surgeons spend on overseas missions.

Currently OS founder Bill McGee foots the bill for World Care cases and flies them to OS headquarters in Virginia.

What's next?

Freedland is considering traveling to Kenya in 1999 for another mission. The goal for Operation Smile as a whole is to visit 45 cities twice and treat 12,000 needy children.

"It's an awesome undertaking," said Freedland, "and the mission numbers keep growing from year to year, with no end in sight."

"Personally I'm rewarded on these trips over and over when I see the effect the surgery has on the child and the family. It's priceless."

"You can't help but smile and say thanks for what you have."

Oakwood performs Alzheimer's research at local Memory Clinic

As many as 65,000 people in the Detroit metro area suffer from a progressive brain disorder known as Alzheimer's disease. They are among the estimated 4 million Americans who are diagnosed with this devastating illness. With the number expected to rise to 7 million by the year 2010, Alzheimer's disease is becoming a growing health problem.

Although there is no cure for Alzheimer's disease, the Oakwood Memory Clinic is participating in a study of a new investigational treatment that has been the subject of ongoing research in persons with mild to moderate forms of this illness.

"This is an exciting time in Alzheimer's research," says investigator Stephen Aronson, M.D., of the Oakwood Memory Clinic, Oakwood Hospital &

Medical Center. "As treatment options expand to offer new reasons for hope, there will be greater reason for physicians to diagnose the disease and for patients to seek early treatment. This study is an opportunity for residents of Detroit and surrounding communities to contribute to the improvement of care for persons with Alzheimer's disease."

The goal of the new study is to further evaluate the effects of this treatment in Alzheimer's disease patients. The six-month trial will involve approximately 900 patients at more than 50 sites.

To allow an unbiased assessment of the medication's effects, approximately 30 percent of the patients involved in the trial will be randomly assigned to receive a placebo (sugar pill) treatment throughout the study, while 70 percent will receive the new medication.

All study participants will receive free, regular medical evaluations and an ongoing, no-charge subscription to the Caring newsletter, created specifically for trial participants. In addition, they will be registered in the Alzheimer's Association Safe Return Program — a nationwide system that uses special identification bracelets of pins bearing a toll-free telephone number to help identify, locate and return to safety memory-impaired individuals who become lost after wandering away.

To be eligible for the trial at Oakwood Memory Clinic, participants must meet certain criteria. To learn more, call (877) STUDY-33.

There's Plenty To Go Around.

Wouldn't it be great if we went through life without any problems? Well, that's not the way things are. We all struggle. But there is a way to face whatever comes along with peace, and with confidence.

We're your neighbors, the people of The Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod, and we invite you to celebrate with us that special hope and peace that Christ alone can bring.

Only one Michigan health plan made the grade in Newsweek's national survey.

HAP stands alone in Michigan: The only health plan to be ranked A, overall, in Newsweek magazine's third annual survey of health plans. And, HAP finished in the top 10% nationally. Newsweek surveyed 200 plans, examining how well they dealt with preventive care; how well they managed acute and chronic conditions; their choice and quality of doctors and hospitals. In all these categories, HAP scored well. It's because we emphasize personalized care from respected physicians and staff, along with prevention, and member education. So, for a health care plan you can feel good about, contact HAP at 313-872-8100 or visit www.hapcorp.org.

Stories gathered in cyberspace

PC TALK
MIKE WENDLAND

Each day, thanks to the nationwide exposure of my High Tech Talk reports on NBC television stations, I get 200 pieces of e-mail. It's impossible to respond to every one. But I do read them all.

they call in to get details on how to volunteer.

Finding College Scholarships
A couple from San Diego, Calif. is looking to ease the costs of sending their 18-year-old high school senior off to college next fall. On the Financial Aid and Information Page (www. finaid.org/) they find dozens of categories their son qualifies for, plus leads on scholarship search agencies and warnings on how to spot scholarship scam artists who charge money for free information already available on the Net.

A "Virtual Funeral"
A Madison, Wis., man is watching a series of pictures sent over the Web of a funeral (www. skc.com). Every 30 seconds a new picture of the funeral service appears. Other mourners are exchanging messages of condolences. The images are from the off-Broadway play "Grandma Sylvia's Funeral" and are being sent to demonstrate the feasibility of having "Cyberfunerals."

Man Traces Roots
A middle aged man in Texas is tracing his family roots from Germany by searching data banks of immigration statistics and 100-year-old marriage, birth and death certificates, online, through genealogical sites on the Web (www. genhomepage.com/). So far, he's gone back four generations and thinks he is the descendant of the Germanic equivalent of royalty.

Finding new and creative marketing ideas...
In suburban Cleveland, the owner of a new insurance agency is visiting The Idea Site (www. ideastiteforbusiness.com/ideamenu.htm) and looking for tactics and techniques for getting new clients. He finds 103 different marketing ideas on the site, including a detailed tipsheet on how to use a personal organizer to locate and then pitch prospective clients by profiling neighborhoods by ZIP codes and then categorizing and prioritizing them by their likelihood to favorably respond to his approach.

Script for Christmas Pageant Found on Net
A drama coordinator at a large "seeker" style contemporary worship church in a Midwestern suburb needed to find an appropriate script for one of the services leading up to Christmas. She went to an Internet site called DramaShare (www. dramashare.org/) and began searching a list of online scripts available to be downloaded and printed out. She found "Live at the Manger," a tightly written and very creative look at what it would have perhaps been like if the media of today descended on the inn in Bethlehem to witness the birth of Jesus. She prints it out, makes copies and starts rehearsals.

Incorporating a new business on the Internet...
In Tyler, Texas, a woman who has been running a small home-based communications and public relations business needs information about structuring her growing operation. Specifically, is it time to incorporate.

It's a Saturday afternoon and on the Web, for free, she's finding all her questions answered about the pros and cons of incorporating through The Company Corporation (www. incorporate.com).

Two Brothers Attend School
Two brothers, 17 and 15, are in school. In their Orlando, Fla. home. On their computer. The school they attend is 3,000 miles away, in California (www. laurelsprings.com), and the teenagers have never set foot inside it. The brothers spend about four hours a day hooked up to the Laurel Springs High School on the family PC, communicating with their teachers via e-mail and doing their research for class projects on the Internet. Around the country, two other such "Cyberschools" operate. Several hundred students now attend school exclusively through the Internet.

Mike Wendland covers the Internet for NBC-TV Newschannel stations across the country. His "PC Talk" radio show airs Saturday and Sunday afternoons on WXYT-Radio AM1270. His latest book "The Complete No Geek Speak Guide to the Internet" is available in book stores or through his Web site at www. pcmike.com

And between all the questions and comments, besides the pleas for troubleshooting help, I hear great stories about how the Internet is being used these days.

Here's a recent sampling of some of the "Stories from Cyberspace" I've collected.

Volunteering as a Foster Grandparent...

In Naples, Florida, a 68-year-old retired businessman wants to fill some of his spare time with meaningful activities. Living in a nice retirement community not far from the Gulf of Mexico, he and his wife also want to find an activity they can participate in together. They do a search of the Net using the keywords seniors and volunteer and are led to something called the National Senior Service Corp., a federally financed organization that helps senior citizens find activities and programs to get involved with in their own communities.

They discover a Web site devoted to foster grandparents (www. whitehouse.gov/WH/EOP/cns/html/sr1.html). It offers people 60 and older opportunities to serve as mentors, tutors, and caregivers for children and youth with special needs. They serve in community organizations such as schools, hospitals, and youth centers. It is exactly what the retired couple were looking for, and through a toll-free phone number found on the Web page (800) 424-8867

GUMMING UP THE WORKS

Periodontal (gum) diseases are caused by bacteria-laden plaque, the sticky film that constantly forms on teeth. The toxins created by these bacteria irritate the gums and can go on from there to break down the attachment of gum tissues to teeth. If left untreated, gum tissues can be destroyed and the infection can progress to bone loss. In addition to plaque, there are also other factors that increase the risk of periodontal disease. They include: smoking or chewing tobacco; poorly fitting bridges; malocclusions; defective restorations that may lead to plaque retention; excessive biting forces, such as clenching or grinding teeth; poor diet; pregnancy or use of oral contraceptives; such systemic diseases as diabetes; and medications such as steroids.

At your next appointment we'll be happy to discuss periodontal disease in detail with you. At LIVONIA VILLAGE DENTAL ASSOCIATES, we are a highly qualified and experienced team of professionals who want you to look and feel your best. Today's technology enables us to make your teeth better looking than ever before. When is the last time you had a complete dental exam? Call us at 478-2110 and we'll gladly answer any questions you may have. We're located at 19171 Merriman Road. Come smile with us! Smiles are our business.

Old Village a mecca for arts

Walking the streets of Plymouth's Old Village you might not realize that Liberty, Starkweather and York Streets inspire music, painting, ceramics, glass art, and sculpture, but in the last five years, more and more artists, craftsmen and musicians have moved into the area. No, it's not as popular as Greenwich Village, Soho, Hamtramck or even Pontiac yet, but it's growing gradually almost under the cover of night.

HARLEM NUTCRACKER

Detroit Opera House hosts revamped holiday tradition

BY FRANK PROVENZANO • STAFF WRITER

Three years ago, renowned choreographer Donald Byrd found a way to merge an honored ballet tradition with modern-day African-American sensibilities. Byrd's utterly entrancing "The Harlem Nutcracker" proves that respecting a 106-year ballet tradition isn't just a recitation of the tried-and-true, but a vital source of inspiration to create new works.

"The Harlem Nutcracker," which opens Friday at the Detroit Opera House, refreshingly transforms the grand magical music of Tchaikovsky's "Nutcracker Suite," and the elegant choreography of Lev Ivanov.

Instead of "The Nutcracker" with classical ballet set to fantasy-inducing music, Byrd has integrated African-American vernacular dancing with Duke Ellington's pounding compositions, arranged by former band member David Berger.

In place of "Dance of the Reed Pipes," there's "Toot Toot Tootie Toot." And filling in for Tchaikovsky's "Dance of the Sugar Plum Fairy" is the Duke's rollicking "Sugar Rum Cherry." The toy wooden soldier of Nutcracker fame has not only been transformed into a handsome modern-day romantic, he's hip-hopppin' to what Byrd characterizes as a completely American sound.

"The major difference (from the original) is that we're dealing with a different culture," said Eleanor McCoy, who portrays Clara, a grandmother who reminisces about her family, and senses the presence of her recently deceased husband, who appears as the Nutcracker Prince.

McCoy, who was one of the original ballerinas at the Dance Theatre of Harlem formed in the late 1960s, is also a former dance coach to Michael Jackson.

"Our version is more of a love story," she said. "It's struck a universal chord because the story is about a grandmother, her eternal love for her husband and their family. You hardly ever see senior citizens in a love story."

In the original ballet, the young girl, Marie, and her fantasy love with a Nutcracker turned prince combines a Lewis Carroll-like surrealism (candies come-to-life) with a mawkish Disney-like "Prince Charming" plot.

In contrast to the "happy ever after" ending, "The Harlem Nutcracker" is more soulful with an unmistakable history lesson, said McCoy. The second scene of Act Two, for instance, features a time-travel sequence from the 1930s to the Civil Rights Marches of the 1950s and 1960s to the desolation caused by the deterioration of some of today's African-American communities.

At the end of the scene, Clara faints, exhausted and discouraged by the prospects for change. But hope is not lost. Not as long as there is love.

It's hardly a coincidence that in the end, the lessons of both Nutcracker stories are identical: Love is as timeless as a melody and a dance that stays in your heart long after you've left the theater.

And that sounds like an ideal theme just in time for the holidays.

Timeless affection: "The Harlem Nutcracker" is based on the love story of two grandparents. The modified classic also features a lesson on recent African-American history.

Is collaboration the future of arts groups?

BY FRANK PROVENZANO

When Ken Fischer of University Musical Society first brought up the idea of collaborating with the Arts League of Michigan and the Detroit Opera House, the timing wasn't particularly good.

Times change. And so has the timing. Three years ago, The Arts League wasn't in a position to allocate funds or resources to the project, nor could the Detroit Opera House, which was in the midst of luring Pavorotti to the grand opening of its world-class venue.

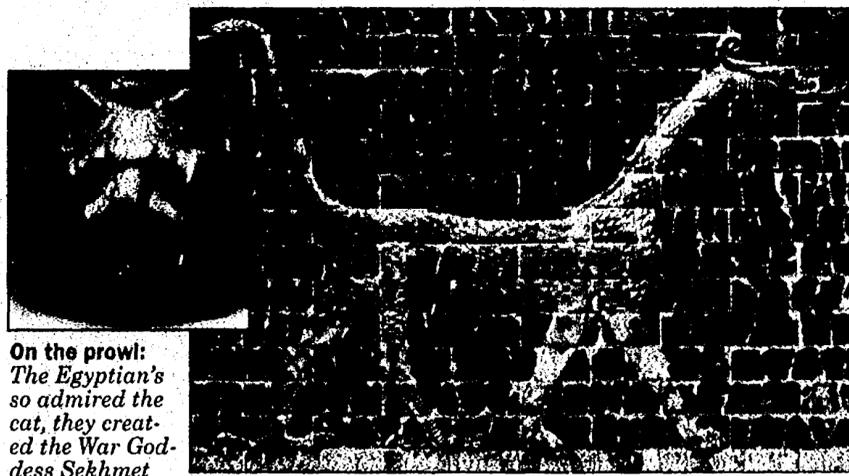

That didn't stop Fischer. As president of the UMS of Ann Arbor, Fischer knew that commissioning Donald Byrd's "The Harlem Nutcracker" couldn't be passed up.

So, in 1995, UMS pushed ahead and joined five other communities around the country in contributing a $500,000 commission for Byrd's interpretation of the Nutcracker classic.

For the last two years, the ballet has been performed at the Power Center in Ann Arbor.

On the prowl: The Egyptian's so admired the cat, they created the War Goddess Sekhmet (1554-1305 B.C.) with the head of a lion.

Struttin': This dragon with a cat-like body, 604-562 B.C., was sacred to Marduk, a Mesopotamian god.

Lions and leopards and bulls, oh my! No, this isn't a tour of the Detroit Zoo. Although that's a great place to take the kids during the holidays too.

The large cats, horned animals, monkeys, birds, and water creatures in the "Beastly Delights for Children" exhibition at the Detroit Institute of Arts introduces children to the animals in the art of ancient Mediterranean and Near Eastern cultures. Condensed in one gallery, the bulls from Turkey, Rome and Egypt, allow parents to keep an eye on wandering kids while teaching them about history.

Similar types of creatures are displayed together in categories such as Fantastic Animals. Flip labels placed on a stand alongside the exhibit cases are designed to create an interactive experience between child and adult. Learn about the more than 35 objects from the permanent collection of ceramics, textiles, jewelry, armor, coins, and sculpture, and how they were used in daily life. The innovative labeling system provides family entertainment and an educational experience at the same time.

"We wanted to do an exhibit for children, something the DIA had never done before," said Beth Hemmila, curator of the exhibit with Penelope Slough, associate curator of the ancient and Islamic art department. "We wanted people to see that different cultures use the same animals in different ways - lions for earrings or for the head of the Egyptian's Goddess Sekhmet. The animals were all revered, but in different ways, and were used for funerary or religious purposes, decoration, and functional objects. Cats - they're incredible hunters. They were threats to herds but people were both afraid of, and awestruck by them. The animals were more important to ancient peoples than today. Back then, you farmed, you herded and hunted. There were work animals, beasts of burden."

The oldest object, a conical-shaped bowl encircled by spotted leopards that look like they're bouncing on their tails, is close to 5,000 years old.

ness attracted me. Then when I got to Mill Street and it looked like Cape Cod, it was inviting. I'm very excited about moving. We have a new beginnings."

Atwood's newest program, Kindermusic Village, is tailored for newborns to 1-1/2 years. "My goal is to provide children, beginning with newborns, with a music education," said Atwood. "We use soothing music for the newborns and activities such as bouncing and rocking, and even work with forms of massage."

Hot glass

Don Schneider first moved his hot glass studio to Old Village 20 years ago. York Street Glassworks features a gallery of blown and lampworked beads, vessels, jewelry, paperweights, gazing globes, door knobs, and ornaments. An internationally-exhibiting glass artist, Schneider's work is in a show featuring 24 bead makers at the Glas Museum in Ebeltoft, Denmark.

Locally, Schneider is exhibiting his work in the Detroit Artists Market Holiday Show continuing through Thursday, Dec. 24, and at the Arts Center in Mt. Clemens through Saturday, Dec. 19. In February, he'll give lessons at his York Street studio in cooperation with the Plymouth Canton Adult Education program.

"It was a decision made 20 years ago to move to Old Village," said Schneider. "It was then and still is an excellent value as studio space."

Clay extravaganza

The Village Potters Guild moved into Old Village shortly after its founding in 1995. Twenty members of the Guild sell their platters, tiles, bowls, ornaments, jewelry as well as hand-built and raku decorative and functional wares Thursday-Saturday, Dec. 3-5 in the space behind the Plymouth Landing Restaurant. Hours are 6-9 p.m. Thursday, Dec. 3, and 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Friday-Saturday, Dec. 4-5.

"Old Village is a nice area," said charter member Kathy Sandberg. "It's a hometown atmosphere, which a lot of local areas don't have, that draws us toward it and hopefully draws customers toward it."

Music and art hand in hand

Charlotte Moore-Viculin moved her studio of music and art to Old Village in 1990. She gives lessons in piano, voice and music theory, performs at weddings and parties, professionally arranges music, paints oil portraits of people and pets, and teaches basic drawing.

"It's a beautiful building and perfect for my needs," said Moore-Viculin.

Artists' haven

Kay Rowe likes the historic aspect of Old Village. The rent is reasonable for her Village Artists Studio because her husband owns the building where she teaches adults the art of creating transparent watercolors. Studio artists exhibit twice a year in group show at the Farmington Public Library. They also have the opportunity to paint the four llamas on site at the Rows' home in Canton.

Painter Charles Aimone, world champion ice carver Ted Wakar, and piano craftsman Patrick DeBeliso are among the other tenants sharing space with Rowe at 775 Davis.

"Old Village is a great spot," said Rowe. "I like the atmosphere, but of course, I love old things."

tance from Stuart Grigg Design in Southfield; the text on the labels is meant to relay as much information as possible in the newest effort by the education department to motivate visitors to learn. For each exhibition, two members of the department work with curators to provide videos, labels, touch screen computers, interactive theater, and the audio tours most recently created for the reopened 20th century galleries. INFORM, a hand-held audio information source, offers visitors the opportunity to select objects about which they want to know more.

"One of the key issues was how to present the material in a way that's interesting," said Czajkowski. "Parents and grandparents are coming with children who are distracted and tugging at their arms. Think of the harried mother who wants to have a quality experience with her children. It's designed with kids age 7 to 10 in mind but I have a four-year-old and it's equally engaging."

Czajkowski and the rest of the education department staff and curators, took a workshop with

Dr. Charles Screven, a well-known museum evaluator and consultant two years ago to learn how to create a "layered experience" for visitors, one that expands on the two-dimension visual. Armed with construction paper and markers, they entered the galleries and discovered among other ideas, flip labels. Laminated, low-glare and visually attractive, they lure visitors to look for the story told on a Greek vessel by asking what the King is doing hiding in a water jar? The decorative imagery features Herakles (from ancient mythology) capturing a wild boar that was destroying the land and frightening the cowardly King Erymanthia.

"The labels wear well. This is hands-on, not just for children but adults and they're learning together," said Czajkowski. "We're trying to make things easier to read with the larger type for grandparents as well as children."

A question about a terra-cotta Hellenistic object from the third to first century B.C. in the boar and pig exhibit case asks which one was used as a toy or rattle?

Common experience

"We tried to pick works of art that children and adults can relate to their everyday objects, to relate the ancient art to a common experience," said Czajkowski. "Kids know right away, it was probably used as a toy."

"The labels are more user friendly," added Hemmila. "They ask a question which prompts you to look at an object. Especially for kids, it's like a game or process of discovery. For the Greeks, the sea was very important to their way of life, so water creatures like a turtle and a boy riding a dolphin appear on coins around 500 b.c."

An Egyptian amulet in the shape of a lion, 332-300 B.C., was meant to protect a person from harm and endowed them with the power of the lion, a symbol of strength even today.

"If you understand a little bit about art, you understand where you're coming from, you understand people," said Hemmila, assistant curator of ancient and Islamic art. "The ancients saw large cats as symbols of power. We wanted to use these attributes to see if we still do that today. There's not the same sacredness but the car industry selects names like cougar or mustang to try to establish power or swiftness as an image and sports teams use names like Lions, Tigers, Bears, and Rams. We still do connect animals to popular culture today with Batman, the Ninja Turtles, and Spiderman."

An amulet in the shape of a frog is the ambassador for the exhibit and the curators have named him Psammy, for the Egyptian King Psammetichus the First, during whose reign life centered around the Nile. A horned animal etched on the cheekpiece of a silver Thracian helmet was worn by a chieftain. The work is a preview of the Thracian art objects to be shown in "Ancient Gold: The Wealth of the Thracians, Treasures from the Republic of Bulgaria," scheduled for June 27 to Aug. 29, 1999. Thrace once occupied most of central Europe from the fifth millennium b.c. until it was gradually conquered by the Romans around the fourth century A.D.

What a difference three years makes. Not to mention a growing membership at The Arts League, a healthy revenue stream at the Detroit Opera House and rave reviews of "The Harlem Nutcracker" over the last two years.

Perhaps that's why along with dancing sugar plums, there's an electric spirit of collaboration among the three principal presenters of this year's "The Harlem Nutcracker."

'How do we feel?'

"Our partnership is like a marriage," said Oliver Ragdale, president of The Arts League, an organization largely made up of African Americans to promote the arts and African-American culture.

"We have wonderful days, and days when we need to work on the relationship."

On the surface, it seems that the collaboration among UMS, The Arts League and Detroit Opera House is a way to broaden audiences for ballet by appealing to African-Americans.

"Sure, there's the racial part to this," said Ragdale. "But the bottom line is that we're in the business of making art happen."

UMS' Fischer deflected any criticism from cynics who might claim the main intent of the partnership is to sell tickets.

"We're building something new," he said. "We constantly ask each other, 'How do we feel?' We do not want to use a Black organization to build our audiences, to look good to a foundation, and then leave."

Many foundations mandate for arts groups to seek partnerships with other arts organizations and offer a community education element in their programs.

The apparent success of the unprecedented collaboration is why the premiere of "The Harlem Nutcracker" at the Detroit Opera House will be watched by more than just live audiences.

Building bridges

"There are a lot of foundations looking at this project," said David DiChiera, managing director of the Michigan Opera Theater, which produces operas and dance concerts at the downtown Detroit Opera House.

"This collaboration is a way to build bridges," he said. "When we bring in a cross-section (of the metro Detroit population), then we know we're fulfilling our mission."

And what's more, the collaboration also fills the prescription for arts groups set forth by the National Endowment for the Arts in "American Canvas," a 1997 report which suggested ways to further build American culture.

The partnership behind the production of "The Harlem Nutcracker," noted UMS' Fischer, also extends beyond the stage.

"One of the brilliant features of Donald Byrd's work is that it involves local communities," he said.

As part of the appeal of bringing "The Harlem Nutcracker" to town, Byrd has arranged for about 30 local dancers to participate on stage, and for local choirs to perform in the lobby before, during intermission and after the performances.

Said Ragdale: "Along with The Rockettes, 'A Christmas Carol,' and 'The Nutcracker,' we see 'The Harlem Nutcracker' as another holiday ritual."

The timing couldn't be better.

Robert Wilbert reflects on the life of an artist

Robert Wilbert agrees to take a few minutes to talk about his lecture on Tuesday at the Birmingham Bloomfield Art Center.

He neatly folds his long, slender hands, sits back and for a moment looks like a white-haired Anthony Perkins, except Wilbert appears much more reasonable and calm.

Nearly two hours later, he's still pondering exactly what he'll cover at the lecture.

But in between handshakes, Wilbert has managed enough aphorisms to fill a book about the ironies of life that an artist must face.

"All the choices you make are reflections of who you are."

A painting, he explained, can hide neither the depth nor superficiality of its author.

An observation that Wilbert finds bitterly accurate and starkly honest.

"You can be too proud of anything you do," he said. "Art is so much about mystery."

How do you cover topics that float like osmosis in a two-hour lecture?

Fold your hands. And listen.

An easy chair

"I'm really an old-fashioned artist," said Wilbert, who retired from Wayne State University after 38 years of teaching painting.

He recites Matisse's oft-quoted

What: A lecture by Robert Wilbert, part of the Captive Audience Lecture Series presented by the Birmingham Bloomfield Art Center.
When: 7:30 p.m. Tuesday, Nov. 24.
Where: 1516 S. Cranbrook Road, Birmingham, (248) 644-0866 remark: "Good art is an easy chair."

That seems to settle comfortably with an artist who claims to have painted sunrises for 30 years, along with still lifes arranged and rearranged so many times that he sometimes wonders if all the possible combinations have been exhausted.

With Wilbert, who continued to pursue representational painting while many of his colleagues explored abstractionism and minimalism, art — like life — should have a simplicity.

In his work, there are no excuses. And no references to complex psychology interpretations or social issues. Just a relentlessly realistic and detailed rendering of the world.

There's something to be said about clarity.

Portrait of an artist

Growing up in Chicago and going to the nearby art museum with an extensive Impressionism collection, Wilbert said for a while he didn't realize that there were other styles.

He came to Wayne State in the mid 1950s from the University of Illinois. And for more than 30 years he taught, and his work was exhibited at the prestigious Donald Morris Gallery.

Today, the Susanne Hilberry Gallery in Birmingham represents Wilbert.

"I don't strain over my work as much as I used to," he said. "It comes a little easier."

In the spring, Wilbert expects to put together a retrospective that features his still life and some of his portraits.

But he's reluctant to call himself a portrait artist.

In June, Wilbert's commissioned portrait of former Michigan Governor James Blanchard was unveiled at the State Capitol.

Although he enjoyed the 30-plus sessions with Blanchard, he said it's the last commission he'll accept. "I'm too lazy for that kind of work," he rationalized.

Instead, Wilbert plans to spend more time in his downtown Detroit studio, located in the shadows of the imploded Hudson's building.

In his studio, he explained, he can rearrange whatever he's painting, including models. And practice the advice he's offered to his students.

"Whatever your subject, it has to be an authentic expression in your art."

In a long career of "authentic expressions," Wilbert looks back at a rather humble explanation for his success.

"I've been lucky, truly fortunate," he said. "I've had a regular job, had some of the best galleries representing me, and I've gotten just enough attention to make it all work."

Time to lean back. Fold his hands. Think about his upcoming lecture.

"I'm going to talk about my work. I have hundreds of slides." And as many aphorisms about the artist's life.

Hilberry, Bonstelle offer enchanting tales

Charming: Fred Shahadi, plays the title role "Scapin" at the Hilberry Theatre. Written by Moliere, "Scapin" is a production of intrigue and slapstick.

With a dose of finesse, flair and charm, "Scapin" enchants the Hilberry Stage, on the campus of Wayne State University in rotating repertory, until Feb. 3.

A tale of intrigue and slapstick, "Scapin" is written by one of theater's greatest comic dramatists, Moliere. The crafty servant Scapin puts a comedic spin on convenient kidnapping, mysterious foreigners and ransom demands, as he cleverly brings two pairs of lovers together in defiance of their fathers.

Fred Shahadi, a new Hilberry graduate student, most recently seen as Mr. Paravicini in "The Mousetrap" portrays, Scapin. Playing the fathers, the victims of Scapin's trickery, are Lucas Caleb Rooney as Argante and Aaron Lake as Geronte. Blair Anderson, who also directed "Of Mice and Men" during last year's season, directs "Scapin."

This week's performances are 8 p.m. Friday-Saturday, Nov. 27-28. Tickets are $10-$17. The theater is at 4743 Cass, call (313) 577-2972 for tickets.

"Little Women" features performances by Gina Lohman, Maribeth Monroe, Julie Ann Yurconis, and Tiffany Marie Bedwell of Garden City. Cynthia Blaise directs.

Dress the table in glitz and candle glow

If you're hosting a Thanksgiving dinner, you have a lot to think about between now and Nov. 26 — like how you're going to dress the turkey, yourself and your table.

While I can't help you with stuffing recipes or what to wear, I can offer these decorating tips, courtesy of folks at shops in Birmingham and Rochester.

"I like to use lots of candles," said Diana Winkworth, one of the owners of Festivities, a downtown Birmingham shop that specializes in ideas and items for home entertaining.

"I just think everything looks better by candlelight," she said.

For a casual look, she suggests interspersing votive candles with gourds, colorful leaves and wheat along the center of the table — either directly on the tablecloth or on a festive table runner or platter.

With the help of the "pineapple candle adapter" that her shop sells, you can turn a pumpkin, pineapple or any fruit or vegetable that's big enough and steady enough into a unique candle holder/centerpiece.

The adapter ($15) is a green, metal, leaf-shaped candle holder with a spike that juts down from its base. Stick the spike into the top of the fruit or vegetable, then put a candle in the holder. For a glittery effect, you could rub gold leaf on the adapter, she said.

If a formal look is what you're after, consider using brass candle sticks with candle shades and followers, she said.

The shades ($5.50 to $30) are like mini lampshades and disperse the light for a warm glow. The followers ($6.50) attach to the candle and the shade. As the candle burns down, the follower follows it down, lowering the shade.

Festivities is located at 337 Hamilton Row in Birmingham. For more information, call (248) 647-7772.

Dean Mooney, a member of the American Institute of Floral Designers and owner of Twiggs & Blossoms floral shop in Rochester, said, "I'm finding that there are two trains of thought when it comes to holiday centerpieces.

"There are those people who like fresh arrangements and those who like artificial ones that they can bring out year after year and refresh with new ribbons or other decorations, and they'll want to refresh them, because what was popular last year isn't necessarily what's hot this year," he said.

So what is hot this year? "Glitz is really popular at the moment," he said. "Anything metallic or gold, and mixing different metallics and gold, not just using one or the other."

So, if you have silver flatware and a silver edge to your china, don't be afraid to use gold chargers under your plates, he said.

"Another thing that's popular is a bountiful look," using lots of fruits and vegetables as decorations, he said.

Some of his favorites to use are broccoli and Brussels sprouts (he puts them on wire picks and uses them in flower arrangements), artichoke and kohlrabi, flowering kale for its purple color, gourds, pie pumpkins, grapes and red and green apples. They can be strewn about the center of the table, put in a cornucopia, in a bowl or on a platter.

If you have a narrow table, consider laying a fresh or artificial garland in a serpentine fashion along the center and adorning it with nuts, berries and other fruits.

Finally, he said, don't be afraid to use fall colors on your table, even if your china has springtime colors like pale blue and pink in it. The colors don't have to match.

"I like to use this example," he said. "When you look at a fall sunset, what do you see? Blues, purples and pinks, and maybe some orange streaks here and there, and it all works together, beautifully."

Twiggs & Blossoms is located at 331 Main Street in Rochester. Call (248) 652-0144 for more information.

Artisans create gifts from the hand

BY LINDA BACHRACK
STAFF WRITER

Though it might be tempting to send your niece a check stuffed into a little paper wallet or to flip through a catalog and order a cozy chenille robe for grandma, think for a moment how special it is to receive a thoughtfully selected gift from the hand.

A handcrafted original makes a one-of-a-kind keepsake, and the metropolitan area is home to hundreds of talented artisans. Some who steal the spotlight were featured at the 1998 Nutcracker Holiday Boutiques, presented by the Detroit Symphony Orchestra Hall Volunteer Council at the Hyatt Regency in Dearborn.

The well-edited collections included Pewabic pottery, collectible dolls, handmade candies, woven scarves, quilted angels, antique timepiece jewelry and hand-wrought silver. A portion of boutique proceeds benefited the DSO. For those of you who are looking for artful creations, the following Nutcracker participants will fill the bill, distinctively.

Margi Mason traditionally turned her kitchen into a mini candy factory every year at Christmas time, cooking up brittles for friends and neighbors. Soon, the sweet gifts became so well known, she started taking orders and finally began her own Royal Oak-based company — Mrs. Mason's Luscious Temptations.

"It's our ingredients and patience that make our Luscious Temptations distinct," says Mason. "Other brittles contain corn syrup for fast cooking. Not ours. We use pure cane sugar which we cook slowly and carefully, giving our brittles a true 'brittle' texture."

These melt-in-your-mouth confections have such passionate names as "True Love" and "Heart & Soul." True Love is a buttery brittle blended with tart cranberries and topped with white chocolate. Heart & Soul contains peanuts and raisins. There's also a white chocolate macadamia, a coconut pecan bark, a wafer-like toffee sandwiched between layers of dark chocolate and a chocolate buttermint, to name a few.

The candies come packaged in gift bags or boxes that are so beautifully designed, they were nominated for an award of excellence. Find Mrs. Mason's candies at Nordstrom, The Fruit Tree in Grosse Pointe Woods, Sweet Retreats in Milford and The Dandy Lion in Rochester. Or call to order, (248) 557-3133. Prices start at $3.25 for a 2-ounce bag.

Pewabic Pottery tiles make special and unique holiday gifts. The pottery's Earthly Treasures Holiday Invitational continues through Dec. 31, with gallery hours from 10 a.m.-6 p.m. Monday-Saturday and 12-4 p.m. on Sunday. A prancing reindeer is one of the new holiday designs. Pewabic Pottery, 10125 E. Jefferson, Detroit. Also, find the tiles at the DIA Museum Shop in the Somerset Collection or Twelve Oaks mall.

Jane Garbinski, of Redford Township, stood in front of the rows of flapper dolls at Recycled Time, contemplating their velvet and satin dresses, their sparkly necklaces and the colors of their hair and eyes. "I collect these dolls," said Garbinski. "I buy one here every year." She finally decided on a sassy redhead dressed in red velvet. She slipped a strand of beads off one of the other dolls and fashioned it around the neck of her selection, making a flattering trade. "People do that all the time," said craftswoman Kathleen Krevsky. "It's great. It personalizes their doll."

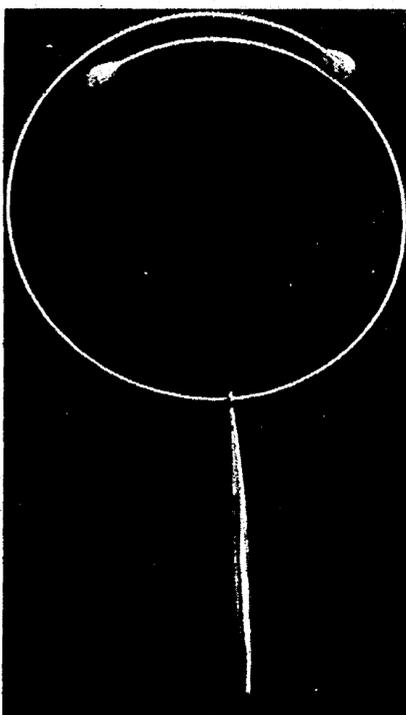

Krevsky's flexible, long-legged flapper dolls and her pins made from antique timepieces and watch parts are the mainstays of her business. To attract attention and display her work, Krevsky, of Dearborn, places Sophie (or is it Thelma or Ruth?) outside of her booth. Sophie, a cigarette dangling from her crimson lips, is dressed in a ratty fur-trimmed coat and a red cloche that barely contains her wild, frizzy hair. A pair of rolled-down stockings peek from beneath her coat. But Sophie is bejeweled, from lapel to hemline, in Krevsky's Recycled Time creations. She makes quite an eye-catching model. Call (313) 593-1058 for information.

Peggy Bonbrisco, of Grosse Pointe Woods, crafts distinctive gifts from antique quilts. Her quilted angels and Santas were hits at this year's boutique. New to the line this season is a flat, wooden quilt-clothed snowman that hangs neatly on a front or back door. Call (313) 885-5107 for information.

Capitalizing on the smokin' hot cigar craze, Kelly Doyle and Ryan O'Day, a brother and sister team from West Bloomfield, create cigar box handbags that are as individual as the stogies contained within. The recycled cedar and cardboard boxes are lined

Conversation with a dream weaver

Mario Gray surprised herself and wowed her fiancé 36 years ago when she picked up a couple of knitting needles and some cream-colored yarn, and wove a simple, sleeveless mock-turtleneck tube dress, very de rigueur in 1962. Thus, the professional model and Queen for a Day hostess invented the original St. John knit ensemble, a creation that evolved into a fashion empire.

"I made it all up as I went along," says Gray. "My knitting experience was limited to half of one sock and a failed attempt at a sweater."

But love conquers all, and Gray was determined to impress her future husband and eventual St. John CEO Robert Gray. "I wanted him to realize that I was not just a fashion model who spent every penny on designer clothes."

The dress became Gray's trademark, combining the fashion elements she prizes today: timeless, elegant, classic designs that fit flawlessly.

After tying the proverbial knot, Bob Gray encouraged Marie to set up shop in the living room of their home, where she created several additional designs on a huge loom, including what would become her signature suit.

Potential buyers were contacted, they placed orders, and a label was launched.

Rather than unravel at the seams, the Grays bought two more looms and moved their business into the garage. Soon, a presidential hopeful was born. Their daughter, Kelly, was spoon-fed the business, and in 1996 the innovative designer, model and business leader took her rightful place at the helm of the company.

"She completely understands the ins and outs of the business," says her mother. "In some ways, she's much more talented than her mom and dad. But we all get feedback from one another. Kelly heads retail, merchandising and advertising and keeps us on track in the design area. Bob tracks sales and oversees all of the financial end of the business, and I'm involved in all of the design aspects."

The trio's design aesthetic makes converts of practically every woman who tries a St. John on for size, including First Lady Hillary Rodham Clinton. The one-loom cottage industry has become a multimillion-dollar conglomerate thanks to the entrepreneurial savvy of its founders, as well as the flexibility of its product.

Says Marie Gray, "The clothes fit precisely and flatter the wearer. They're soft, comfortable, elegant, feminine and the colors are gorgeous."

In town on Nov. 12 for a Neiman Marcus and Lovelight Foundation fashion show and luncheon, Gray presented her 1999 Cruise Collection. Highlights included simple sheath dresses paired with long cardigans or short jackets; ethnic-inspired tunics and short bronze skirts; classic evening suits; and glamorous gowns embellished with crystals and embroidery. The color palette ranged from earth tones to bright shades of azalea and blue tourmaline.

As is the nature of the fashion biz, Gray was already spinning yarns about Fall/Winter 1999. "I brought my sketchbook with me," she said as she penned drawings in her Townsend hotel room. Next spring was quickly becoming a fond memory.

DSO discovers good eating Japanese style

(The Detroit Symphony Orchestra is on tour in Japan through Tuesday, Nov. 24. In this article Ervin Monroe gives his impressions of Japan.)

BY ERVIN MONROE
PRINCIPAL FLUTE,
DETROIT SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

The Arrival: Fourteen hours and four movies later - the musicians of the Detroit Symphony Orchestra disembarked Flight No. 71, a non-stop from Detroit to Nagoya, Japan. We are weary but ready to begin our Northwest Airlines Friendship Tour to Japan, with concerts in Toyota City and Otsu City.

We landed in Nagoya on schedule at approximately 5:30 pm. It was dark and the air was warm and humid. The bus ride to Toyota was very interesting. The local businesses were well lit with bright lights and brilliant colors and English words sporadically appeared as part of company names or advertising jargon.

Words like "Family Mart," "Super Dry," and "Tune-Up" appeared out of nowhere.

Even delivery trucks had the word "Express" written underneath highlighted Japanese characters.

The Orchestra is staying in two different hotels, and ours is on the outskirts of town. We were anxious to eat upon arrival, and there were several restaurants in the neighborhood. We set out with several other musicians to dine in Japanese style. We found an interesting spot.

Upon entry we discovered several of our group already dining. Caroline Coade of Birmingham, violinist, and Jeffery Zook of Royal Oak, piccolist, were sitting in the traditional section enjoying bowls of noodles. We decided to also sit in that area of the restaurant but quickly realized the difficulties involved for the tall members of our party.

Donald Baker, our principal oboist, is 6 feet, 3 inches tall and had a challenge getting his feet under the very low table. He finally locked into a strange position, his knees nearly at his ears, looking like an Olympic luge racer.

I sat between my wife and Sharon Sparrow, flutist, who finally found a comfortable position by stretching out their legs to the side, Cleopatra-Style. With my legs crossed, I felt like a Buddha surrounded by two Princesses of the Nile.

We successfully ordered by pointing to items on the menu, and were quickly enjoying the local fare. The only mistake the waiter made was to bring one more extra large sake than requested.

This was no problem, really. Susan, Sharon and I ordered shabu-shabu, a Japanese fondue.

ter, which had an unusual collection of ancient tea pots discovered in different parts of Japan.

Tea time

The exhibition also featured many modern day art works and a ceremonial Tea Room where we were served by women dressed in traditional Japanese kimonos.

This green tea was frothy and thick. Mine tasted and smelled very much like the grass I mow in my front lawn. In another building at the exhibit we were offered the more traditional green tea, along with a snack which consisted of warm rice mixed with soy paste served on a popsicle stick.

It was rather tasty, and we later learned that this rice on a stick is a common snack here.

We traveled from the Art Center to Koraneki. The winding roads passed ever so close to the homes along the way, and at times I could look out our bus window and see the ceramic tile roofs an arm's length away.

There were many vending machines along the road, and American words were again prevalent, though not always appropriate. One popular drink in vending machines is called "Sweat" - hardly appetizing, even when thirsty.

The resort area we visited reminded me of Ogunquit, Maine, or Tarpon Springs, Florida. It was a quaint village of shops and interesting scenery, with amazing traffic jams on the outskirts. We were surrounded by mountainous terrain adorned with the color of Japanese maples.

One could stroll among the many street shops, or take a tall pedestrian bridge over a rocky creek to a wooded walkway that led to a nature hike. There were many people in the shopping area, but we were the only non-Japanese in the crowd.

At the temple

There was an interesting Shinto temple nearby, and we watched as many Japanese visitors approached the altar to toss coins into an open box and pull one of three long cords hanging in the entranceway. A bell would clang.

Lenore Sjoberg of Holly, violinist, explained that she had read that these bells were rung to get the attention of the gods to answer prayers.

Lenore's husband, Geoffrey Applegate, principal second violinist, and I decided to find a men's room but there were no American signs to be found. We agreed to go back to the obvious restrooms at the bus parking lot.

As is typical even in America, there was a long line in front of the ladies' room, and there was no waiting at the men's room directly adjacent. Geoff and I had no sooner begun taking care of our business when a young lady emerged from a stall behind us. "Are we in the wrong place?" I asked Geoff. "We're standing, aren't we?" he replied.

Maybe oops

"I think I remember reading that they do this kind of thing over here," he added. Even as he finished his sentence, two other ladies came into the room and entered the stalls, politely holding their hands as though shielding their eyes from us as they passed.

Susan and Lenore waited in line for the women's room which they also found quite different than the public restrooms in America. Upon entering a very narrow cubby, women delicately straddle a long thin ceramic bowl mounted flush to the floor.

There's no room for error, and women here apparently become very accomplished at the delicate and precise maneuver.

Back to the hotel after our sightseeing journey, we flipped on the television in the room. Susan became intrigued by the Sumo wrestlers, who were apparently in some kind of tournament. This was one of several programs that were broadcast simultaneously in both Japanese and English, a new and provocative demand on the mental focus of weary travelers, which proved too draining for us. So we decided to take a stroll instead and look for a small restaurant away from the main business thoroughfare.

We found a little cluster of stores that included a carry-out place that had the word "Snack" written above it and we could smell food and hear sounds from an adjoining building that appeared to be a very small restaurant.

We peered through the window and saw a counter with stools filled with people eating. We finally took courage and walked inside where we instantly became the center of attention.

The lady behind the counter motioned us toward a tiny back room where we could see some tables, but two men sitting at the counter offered us their seats. There was much chatter, and we knew instantly that our presence was an unusual event. This was obviously a community gathering place, and the work area behind the counter was like a home kitchen.

I ordered a beer, "bieru" here. I held up my fingers for two, and we were served two small glasses and one giant bottle. No sooner had I poured the beer than the gentleman sitting on Susan's right and the lady behind the counter offered a toast of "Cheers," so we returned the salute.

What menu?

Ordering food, however, was not as easy. We asked for a "menu," a word everyone understood, and the whole place broke out in laughter. One of the ladies behind the counter pointed to this small piece of paper pinned to the wall, covered in Japanese characters.

This was going to be a challenge. Susan was carrying on a Robinson Caruso-and-Friday conversation with the gentleman on her right, and neither seemed to be making great progress in communication but were having a good time trying.

We noticed some giant pieces of tofu being warmed in broth on the counter in front of us. We pointed to it, and the lady brought two bowls. It was good. We tried naming different dishes, but no one seemed to understand.

Eventually the word "sashimi" arose, and I nodded approval. One of the workers in the busy little restaurant produced a package of raw fish still wrapped from the local mart.

She pointed to both sides of the container, one being tuna and the other mackerel. I nodded approval to both sides. She appeared surprised that I would order so much, and I realized that this was not a typical working man's fare.

After it was served, I became very aware of my chopstick technique, because we were being scrutinized by everyone present. I knew we were doing dismally when Susan's new friend complimented our efforts with "Chopsticks - good."

Shortly thereafter I splashed a generous amount of soy sauce all across my white shirt and turned quickly to see if I was caught in the act by the locals, both standing and seated. Miraculously, it must have happened at the only moment when they were all looking away!

These are very polite people. Three men-in-suits arrived, young businessmen, and sat at the other end of the counter by the grill. With each newcomer, we could hear the word "menu" included in their conversation followed by a round of hearty laughter.

One of the ladies behind the counter began preparing what looked to us like waffles. We watched her with interest, and soon were served two large portions of more tofu, compliments of the men by the grill.

One carefully said to us, "Delicious," and we nodded approval. Shortly thereafter, Susan and I requested a check.

We realized they were purposefully delaying when we were suddenly served a dainty saucer with some small shavings in a fine brown teriyaki sauce.

Susan's new friend pointed to his ankle tendons. I think the dish contained pig knuckles. I realized that I was being tested by the natives, who had not been sufficiently impressed that I could eat raw fish.

His finest hour

Susan looked on in horror while I began what would most likely be my most challenging performance of our Japan Friendship Tour.

The delicacy was very chewy, and I finished the dish very quickly. The lady brought the check, and announced the total in Japanese.

I looked puzzled, and she repeated the sum, as though I could understand. She laughed when I gestured for her to write it out. As we stood to go, a gentleman who might have been the owner came to us with a baby boy in his arms. He said something to the young lad, who then put his hands to his lips and blew kisses to us. We returned the gesture and everyone smiled and waved goodbye. It was special evening.

Tomorrow we begin our concerts.

Blazers storm into regionals

Spartans routed in district, 62-30

BY BRAD EMONS
SPORTS WRITER
bemons@oe.homecomm.net

Livonia Stevenson's basketball team entered Friday night's Class A district championship game feeling a little bit woozy.

And the Spartans, who had only eight players available for practice Thursday because of various injuries and illnesses, left Livonia Ladywood's gym feeling worse as the host Blazers administered a 62-30 beating.

Ladywood (13-10) moves into the regional semifinals 7:30 p.m. Monday at Dearborn High School to face Detroit King, the Public School League and Operation-Friendship champion. King ousted Ladywood in last year's regional final, 66-28.

Stevenson, which bowed out at 12-10 overall, was simply no match for the Blazers, who caused 17 turnovers in the first half en route to a 35-18 half-time lead.

Ladywood shredded Stevenson's 1-2-2 and 1-3-1 zone defenses.

And to make matters worse, Stevenson sophomore point-guard Lindsay Gusick suffered a concussion during the second quarter and didn't return.

That opened the door for Ladywood senior guard Erin Hayden, who finished the night with a career-high 22 points on eight of 17 shooting from the floor.

GIRLS BASKETBALL

Hayden, who shot four of 18 in Ladywood's 63-28 district semifinal win over Southfield, hit a pair of threes in the opening half, while junior guard Kristin Barnes came off the bench to nail three triples.

"That's not the way we shot the ball against the zone the other night," said Ladywood coach Andrea Gorski, who collected her third district title trophy in three years. "We struggled that whole game. We knew Stevenson liked to play man-to-man, but after the way we shot it against Southfield, I wasn't surprised they went zone."

Crisp ball movement offensively and full-court pressure defensively was the key.

"We tried to move the ball quicker," Gorski said. "And when you hit some early ones, the more you want to shoot it and the more you feel you can shoot it."

"And our press has really won a lot of basketball games. We switched our presses up to keep the pressure on them. And the last couple of games we've been really aggressive and that's helped us get any early lead."

Barnes came off the bench to score 10, while starters Elena Sventickas

Wyatt in; Ladywood admits violations

VOLLEYBALL

When official volleyball practice starts Monday, Livonia Ladywood will be working on its third varsity volleyball coach during the off-season.

The heir apparent to Tom Teeters is JV coach Larry Wyatt, who entered the muddled revolving door after Terrie Lee Drake, hired in October, quit unexpectedly last week.

Teeters, who carved out a 532-97-14 record in 12 seasons, including 10 Catholic League titles and two state championships, parted ways with Ladywood administrators back in July after his demand to remove Wyatt and freshman coach Amber Wells went unheeded.

Teeters is now the varsity coach at Plymouth Salem.

Drake, an elementary school physical education teacher in the Chippewa Valley Schools with an impressive coaching resume, took the varsity post which became open Nov. 9 at Dakota High School when Bob Ward resigned.

But Drake said the Dakota opening had no bearing on her leaving Ladywood.

"I'm sorry this happened because the Ladywood kids are hard-working kids, good kids from good families," said Drake, who was the former head softball and volleyball coach at the University of South Carolina. "But there were many issues that came about after I took the job that I couldn't accept and couldn't put my name on."

"I'm not going to risk a 26-year reputation to straighten out that mess."

Ladywood athletic director Sal Malek has admitted that off-season participation violations involving Ladywood players and Wyatt's Motor City Volleyball Club were made.

Coaches are allowed contact with only three players or less during the school year in any kind of practice setting.

Malek said he has notified Catholic League Director Thomas Rashid of the violations.

Rashid told the Observer last week that he is drafting a letter to submit to the Michigan High School Athletic Association informing the MHSAA of the infractions.

What penalties or sanctions, if any, against the Ladywood program made by the MHSAA are pending.

"We found out indirectly about the three-player rule within our facility and we've turned ourselves into Tom (Rashid)," Malek said. "Larry rents it out and we had three players on one side of the gym and three on another."

"From here on out Larry can't have any contact with any girls (during the off-season). No Ladywood players will be allowed to play in his club. It will be zero tolerance rule."

Malek, however, supports his new coach.

"There's not doubt she (Drake) has an impressive resume and is a qualified lady," he said. "But we're going to do what's best for Ladywood. There's no hidden agenda. I think we'll be fine overall."

Wyatt takes over a program that finished 53-9-1 overall, reached the state quarterfinals and won its seventh straight Catholic League title.

Five of six starters graduated with the exception of 6-foot-1 middle hitter Jenny Young, a first-team All-Observer pick who recently signed with Central Michigan University. Ladywood's season opener is Dec. 12 at Midland.

"We're going to do the best we can for the program," Wyatt said. "I know the bar has been set high, but I'll try to continue to do what Tom's done, even though it's a hard act to follow. I just hope I can continue the success and tradition that's been going on as far and as long as I know at Ladywood."

Wyatt, who started the Motor City Volleyball Club four years ago, said he has players from "20 or so schools" in his off-season AAU program.

"As soon as I was told we were out of compliance, I made an effort to put it into compliance with the rules," Wyatt said. "I had interpreted what we were doing was OK. As soon as it wasn't, we fixed that."

Wyatt, 29, is a graduate of Redford Thurston High School where he played football.

He began playing recreational volleyball in high school and spent one year as freshman coach at Novi and the last three as JV coach at Ladywood (where he was brought on board by Teeters).

He has also coached in two other local AAU volleyball clubs.

Wyatt is employed by the Ford Motor Co.

Defending champs stop Stevenson

PREP HOCKEY

Trenton, the defending Class A state hockey champion, scored three unanswered goals in the third period to break a 1-1 tie and beat Livonia Stevenson 4-1 in a non-league game at Livonia's Eddie Edgar Arena.

Two of Trenton's goals came on the power play. This was the season opener for both teams.

Angelo Petruccio's goal, assisted by John Nadsam and Nick Ouellette, gave Trenton a 2-1 lead 5:09 into the third period. The Trojans pushed their lead to 3-1 when Andy Greene scored his second goal of the game assisted by Brent Ward less than two minutes later.

Trenton added an insurance goal at 13:00 of the third period as Ward capitalized on the power play with the assist going to Kurt Latarte.

Stevenson's lone goal came from Ryan Siska, assisted by Mark Nebue, with 17 seconds left in the second period. Trenton took the game's first lead, as Greene scored on the power play, assisted by Petruccio, with six seconds left in the first period.

Stevenson goaltender Kevin Mariowe made 22 saves. Stevenson outshot Trenton in every period, finishing with 33.

"We played hard, the puck just didn't drop our way in the third period," Stevenson coach Mike Harris said. "They have a sweet power play. I can't be disappointed. Yeah we lost but it was our first game of the year and for a lot of the players it was their first high school game. We have to get back to the drawing board and get ready to play RU."

STATE TOURNAMENT GIRLS BASKETBALL ROUNDUP

Michelle Harakas also had 10 points.

The Blazers shot 24 of 52 from the floor (46.1 percent), while Stephenson was 11 of 37 (29.7 percent).

"We watched the way they (Ladywood) shot the ball the other night and the whole idea was that we were more concerned about their inside play and the driving of Hayden," Stephenson coach Wayne Henry said. "But we didn't get out there on the perimeter fast enough against their shooters. But when the team shoots that well, there's nothing you can do."

Ladywood also took good care of the basketball, committing just 11 turnovers compared to Stephenson's 28.

Senior forward Stephanie Dulz scored a team-high eight for the Spartans, while Katie LeBlanc and Cassie Ehlerdt each added seven. Ehlerdt also grabbed 11 rebounds.

Gusick's injury occurred when she was inadvertently struck in the back of the head by a teammate.

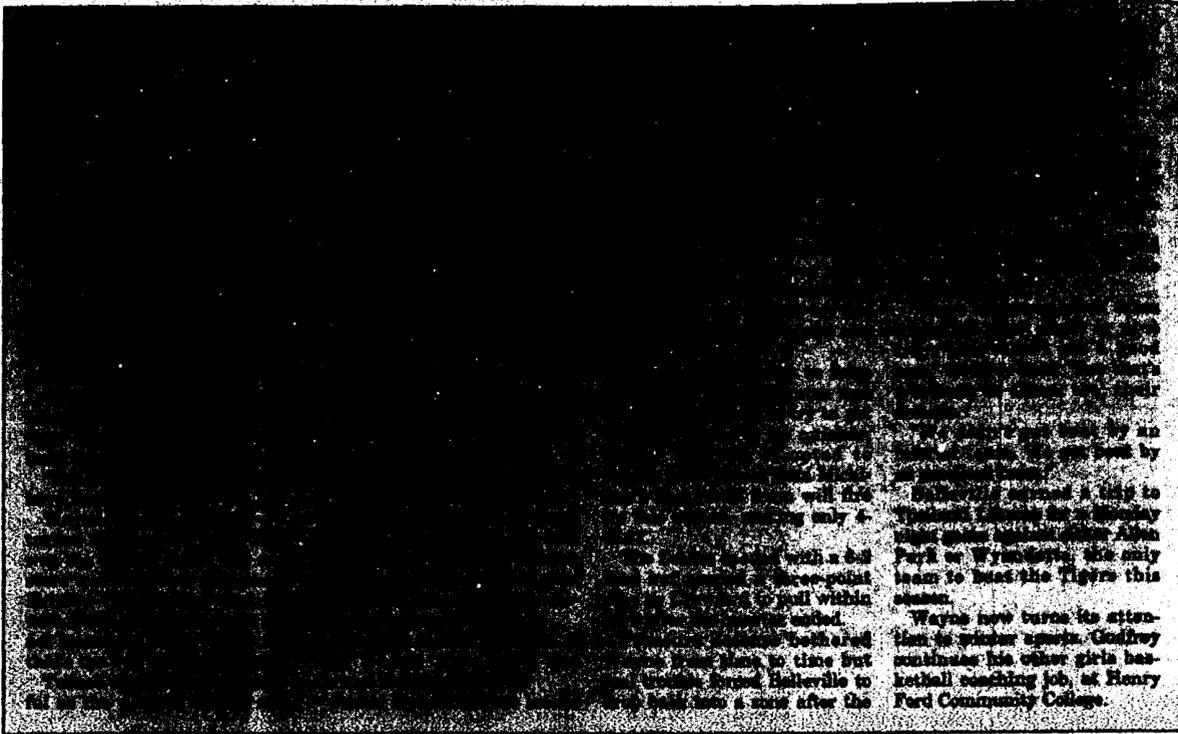

"Not as an excuse, but we were still in the game after one quarter," said Henry, whose team trailed 18-10. "We had four or five out of practice with only seven or eight healthy people."

"Both (Cheryl) Fox and (Kim) Giller were sick. Gusick didn't practice because she had her contacts adjusted. (Katie) King was out (ankle) and Ehlerdt has a bad back."

"But I still thought with our defense, that we'd be OK. But our foot apped getting out on their shooters was not fast enough."

Ladywood's meeting with King, whose only loss this season is to Beverly Hills-Detroit Country Day, could be interesting.

"We need another 22 from Erin, but not only Erin, we need two or three others in double figures," Gorski said. "They'll be all over us, trapping full-court. They're deep and good inside. They throw in five at you at a time and do a good job in their half-court defense of taking the pass away."

Plymouth Salem knocks off Northville for Novi district crown

BY C.J. RISAK

There would be no comeback this time.

Both Plymouth Salem and Northville weathered tight, down-to-the-wire battles in their Class A district semifinals at Plymouth Canton to advance to play each other in Friday's final. For Northville, it had taken a fantastic rally from an 11-point, fourth-quarter deficit to edge Canton in the semis; for Salem, a final quarter devoid of points — a six-point burst in the last 29 seconds saved the Rocks — nearly gave the win to Novi.

Could such a thing happen again? When the Mustangs' Emily Carrott knocked down a three-pointer with 2:45 left in the game (she made three triples in the fourth quarter against Canton), and Janel Hasse followed with a free throw 27 seconds later, Salem's lead was just three.

But that was it for Northville. The Rocks kept their composure and drained their free throws down the stretch, converting 9-of-12 in the final 1:37, to win going away, 40-28.

The win gives Salem its first district crown since 1995 and boosts the Rocks' record to 18-4. They advance to the Novi regional, where they will play West Bloomfield (also 18-4) at approximately 7:30 p.m. Monday. The winner of that game advances to the regional championship game at 7 p.m. Wednesday at Novi.

West Bloomfield captured the Bloomfield Hills Lahser district title by beating North Farmington 58-42 Friday.

"It feels awesome," said Salem senior forward Andrea Pruet. "I just told myself that, No. 1, I wouldn't lose to Canton again (she didn't; the Rocks beat the Chiefs twice) — I hate that feeling — and that I would take this team as far as I could. I don't care how well I do . . . I just love this team."

Pruett, who had struggled offensively in the last two weeks, didn't in this game. She boosted the Rocks with a game-high 17 points, including six in the third quarter when Salem pulled out to a 22-14 lead.

But this was not an offensive gem of a game, for either team. The Rocks committed 23 turnovers; Northville had 21. The Mustangs also went scoreless in the first period, going 0-for-9 from the floor; but the Rocks didn't do a heckuva lot better, making 5-of-15 first-half shots to make their halftime lead just 12-9.

In the third quarter Northville really struggled against Salem's quick-handed defense. On four consecutive possessions the Mustangs didn't even get a shot, committing turnovers each time down the floor as the Rocks built their lead to 22-11. It took a desperation three-pointer at the buzzer by Kelly Anderson — her only points of the game — to revive Northville, making it an eight-point deficit after three.

Mary Tanski, a 6-foot sophomore, provided a spark for the Mustangs in the fourth quarter, coming off the bench to score their first six points of the period. But free throws, ultimately, proved pivotal. For the game, Salem made 17-of-21 (81 percent); Northville was 2-of-9 (22 percent).

"They are a real good team," said Mustangs' coach Pete Wright of Salem. "They did a nice job on us defensively. They had a hand in there all the time, and we had a hard time getting a good look offensively."

The 9-0 deficit to start the game didn't help matters, either. "We were too far behind," Wright said. "We made a run (in the fourth quarter), but it was too big a hill to climb."

Indeed, after that scoreless opening — the first Northville points came on a Carrott basket 14 seconds into the second quarter — the Mustangs never had the lead. The closest they got was one (12-11), on a Janel Hasse basket with 5:43 left in the third quarter.

"Our kids really played nice defense," said Salem coach Fred Thomann. "And I thought our guard play was better than their guard play tonight."

What Thomann wanted his Rocks to do was interrupt Northville's inside game, fueled by junior 'Twin Towers' Janel and Meredith Hasse, by preventing the entry pass. They did, getting a hand into most of the interior passing lanes. Salem also rebounded well against the Hasses (both over 6-foot).

"We didn't want to give up any offensive rebounds, and I think we did a pretty good job of that," Thomann said.

The Hasses combined for just nine points, all of them scored by Janel, a total that led Northville. Carrott was next best with five.

Tiffany Grubaugh added 10 points for the Rocks and Lindsay Klemmer, who nailed 6-of-8 free throws in the final 1:37, scored eight.

Schoolcraft sharpshooter McKelvey signs with Martin

BY BRAD EMONS
SPORTS WRITER
bemons@oe.homecomm.net

There has been a bevy of recent NCAA letter-of-intent signings around Observerland. Here is the latest round:

• Schoolcraft College guard Derek McKelvey (Adrian) signed an NCAA National Letter-of-Intent to play basketball with the University of Tennessee-Martin, a Division I school in the Ohio Valley Conference.

RECRUITING

The 6-foot-3 McKelvey averaged 18.5 points per game and led the country in total three-point field goals (127). He also ranked in the top 10 nationally in three-point field goal accuracy (47.1 percent).

McKelvey had 20 points in SC's season-opening 110-79 win over Muskegon CC.

• Redford Catholic Central's Bob Malek (Livonia), a 6-foot, 170-pound outfielder, is one of five Michigan State University baseball signees.

Malek, a 1998 All-Observer and All-State Dream Team selection, batted .697 last spring for the Shamrocks with three homers and 40 RBI. Malek, who throws right-handed and bats left, was also an All-Catholic League selection.

Malek is goined by MSU recruits Brett Wattles, an outfielder from Rochester High; Ryan Kurtz, a left-handed pitcher from Toledo (Ohio) St. Francis de Sales; Tom Hackney, a catcher from East Lansing; and Charley Braun, an infielder from Grosse Pointe South.

• Malek's Livonia Travel summer league teammate Roy Rabe of Livonia Stevenson, an infielder-pitcher, has signed with Oakland University.

Rabe led the Spartans last spring with a .400 average (28 for 70) with 22 RBI.

• Westland John Glenn's Chris Tompkins will play golf next year for Eastern Michigan University.

The two-time All-Observer choice helped the Rockets to their first-ever state meet berth. He also considered Kansas State and Purdue.

Tompkins plans to major in education.

Lady Ocelots ousted in tourney

The fine season enjoyed by Schoolcraft College's women's soccer team wasn't enough to carry it past the NJCAA District semifinals.

The Lady Ocelots, ranked 12th in the NJCAA, ran into district host St. Louis-Meramec in Saturday's semi. After a fairly even first 60 minutes, the tide changed to favor fifth-ranked Meramec, which advanced to the championship game with a 3-0 blitz of SC.

The Ocelots finished with a 13-4-1 overall record. Meramec (19-3) went on to upset fourth-ranked Lewis and Clark CC 1-0 in the final to advance to the NJCAA Tournament in Trenton, N.J., today through Sunday.

"They were a wide-open, high-pressure team," was SC coach Bill Tolstedt's description of Meramec. "In the second half, they stepped up their pressure and we had a hard time clearing the ball effectively."

With the defense having problems, the Ocelot midfielders started retreating to help out, which meant fewer offensive chances for SC and more for Meramec. "Our inability to clear resulted in too many (Meramec) scoring chances," Tolstedt said. "I knew going in what our weaknesses were. I thought when we got to the tournament it could be a concern, and it was.

"I really thought we could have done better, but there are no complaints."

Meramec got what proved to be the only goal it would need 17 minutes into the second half. It was 2-0 when the final goal was scored with seven seconds remaining.

SC's best scoring chance came early in the second half, when in one flurry the Ocelots hit the post, knocked the rebound off the Meramec keeper, then drilled another shot off a defender.

"We were not as effective against that style of play as we had been," said Tolstedt.

Players singled out for solid contributions in the game were Julie Majewski (from Plymouth Canton), Lisa Tolstedt and Annie Hagenah. Those three, plus Dianna Dean, are in consideration for NJCAA All-American honors.

Mach's CC attack continues to churn

BY STEVE KOWALSKI
STAFF WRITER
skowalski@oe.homecomm.net

Former Redford Catholic Central football standout Jeff Wiska remembers some of the first early-morning practices conducted by Tom Mach in August, 1976, Wiska's senior year.

The CC players were running sprints for their rookie coach. It was still dark but the Shamrocks would later come to realize that's not the only reason they weren't in a passing drill.

Mach was never too fond of the forward pass. "He started yelling at the players but the sun wasn't up yet," remembers Wiska, now a distribution center manager for a lumber company in Wayne. "Half the time he was yelling at the wrong guy. 'Dammit, Wiska. Oh, that's (Joe) Maiorana. Sorry Joe.'"

"He called it the toughest hour in Michigan. I guess it was from 6 to 7 in the morning in August and I don't think others were running continuous sprints like we were. He had so much enthusiasm. If you didn't know he was the coach you'd think he was a senior. He still looks like he's 30."

It didn't take long for the Shamrocks to know Mach was serious about winning and 22 years later no one's surprised he owned a 199-42 career record entering Saturday's Class AA state playoff semifinal against Sterling Heights Stevenson.

A win against Stevenson would put Mach at 200 faster than any coach in state history. He has won five state championships, including four Class AA crowns in the 1990s.

Mach has a 21-2 playoff record this decade, with nearly half of the wins decided by less than a touchdown, two in overtime.

There are 24 coaches with 200 or more career wins. Dick Koski of Negaunee and John Herrington of Farmington Hills Harrison were the quickest to get there, winning their 200th games in their 24th year.

Mach has had 46 all-state players, starting with Maiorana, who went on to star at Central Michigan.

The two coaches with at least 300 wins are still active. Saginaw Nouvel's Smokey Boyd has 302 career wins and Marysville's Walt Braun reached 300 this year.

Rick Coratti has been Mach's defensive coordinator every year.

"Like Batman and Robin, it's hard to imagine one without the other," said Wiska, a line-man who went on to star at Michigan State and play three years in the National Football League. "Everything he teaches, you can take to the classroom, student council, anything you want to be. He is the high school version of what Vince Lombardi was to the Green Bay Packers. I can honestly say of all the coaches I've had, he's the best, even the pro ones."

CC was Mach's first head coaching job. He came there from Southgate Aquinas, where he was the defensive coordinator for a few years.

"I never thought I'd get the job," Mach said. "I thought it would be a great interview." Four of Mach's former assistants at CC, Jim Gibbons (Redford Union), Jim DeJaeger (Rochester Adams), Chuck Baughman (Dearborn) and Terry Powers (Royal Oak Kimball) became head coaches at other schools.

Joining Coratti on Mach's current varsity staff are George Kuncic and Roy Dudas. Kuncic has been with Mach for 16 years and Dudas, a former Wayne State full-time assistant and an offensive line whiz, has been with him since 1990.

Junior varsity coach Mark Gagnon has been on staff since 1992. Recent CC graduates Chris Johnston, Joe Herman, Todd Lackey, Jack Davidson and Aaron Babicz returned as assistants with either the JV or freshmen teams.

Two of the constants of Mach coached teams have been a strong running game and tough defense.

There was a time Mach was content to run every play but with the advent of more creative defenses, he has obliged those wanting a more wide-open offense.

Wide open to Mach is 10 passes. Whoever coined the phrase "three yards and a cloud of dust" must have been thinking of Mach. Maybe that's why he was so content with a practice field outside of school so ripped up year after year.

"I knew the run more than the pass and I went with what I felt comfortable with," said Mach, 51, who teaches physical education at CC. "Then I found out it's beneficial to winning, keeping the ball away from the other team, and letting your defense and kicking game help you win."

Mach and his wife, Lynn, have been married 21 years. The couple had twin sons, Mike and Joe, now eighth graders at Hilbert Junior High.

Tom and Lynn were married in the chapel at the former site of CC, on Outer Drive near Seven Mile Road, in July, 1977. Lynn, who says she wasn't a football fan before meeting Mach, had an idea he was true to his school when they walked out man and wife.

"Instead of seeing our initials in flowers on the car, it was 'CC' in flowers," Lynn remembers. "That gave me a clue it was a big part of our life."

The two honeymooned in Traverse City. Yeah, probably so he could sneak a peak at what kind of team the town had that year.

Traverse City was a state power at the time, eventually winning three state championships, including the 1988 state final against CC.

Instead of a movie, sometimes Lynn would go to a game Mach was scouting when they were dating.

"It was mainly so I could see him," she said, laughing.

Lynn drives a newer model van, but Mach is content with keeping their 1977 truck and 1984 Cadillac running.

That's how simple he is.

The truck is currently sitting idle in front of the house with brake problems. "I only go in it when we take the dog to the vet," Lynn said. "That's his good luck truck."

"You can see the ground through the floor boards," laughs Gagnon.

Mach grew up in Berkley and wanted to join the priesthood, attending Sacred Heart Seminary in Detroit for high school.

Sacred Heart didn't have varsity sports programs.

"The hardest thing I didn't do is not play football in high school," Mach remembers. After nearly five years at Sacred Heart he decided to become a teacher and coach, leaving for Wayne State University, where he earned a starting position on the football team as a defensive back.

That he made the Tartars despite not playing high school football amazed his coaches. They nicknamed him Crack for all the tough hits he delivered on opponents.

"They said if I want to come out I could give it a try but they sure didn't think I'd be a ballplayer after not playing four years," Mach said. "I had to watch the guys put on their pads the first time because I forgot where everything went."

Winning 300 games is certainly a possibility for Mach if he stays with it but he's not looking beyond Saturday's game.

He looks forward to coaching his sons at CC but doubts if he'll stay as long as the Shamrocks' wrestling coach Mike Rodriguez, who is now coaching his grandson - football and wrestling standout Brocc Naysmith.

Rodriguez is the only coach at CC with more state championships than Mach: seven.

"I'm not predicting how long I'm going to do this," he said. "I wasn't even shooting for 200. I just like coaching. I like the high school kid because it's a great age to help shape their priorities and morals."

BOWLING & RECREATION

Juncos find weather milder in Michigan

TIM NOWICKI

The winter bird feeding season is upon us.

Those of us who enjoy watching birds at backyard feeders recognized the new season when the dark-eyed juncos appeared in October.

Juncos leave their northern Michigan and Canada breeding areas to winter in milder southern climes. To northern Canada juncos, southeastern Michigan is their Florida.

According to the Feeder Watch program, sponsored by Sapsucker Woods and the Cornell Lab of Ornithology, most feeder watchers have juncos visiting.

In fact, 69 percent of 7,581 observations reported juncos at feeders. That makes it the most frequently counted bird at winter feeders.

Next in line, and not far behind (68 percent), was the mourning dove. Doves are very prolific and have adapted to living in suburban areas readily.

Last year and this year I had one nesting on the ledge of my chimney. Both the junco and dove enjoy eating the peris millet seeds that are found in the premium mixes blended by the specialty bird feeding stores.

House finches were third on the list. It is amazing to me that this species has become so abundant, considering its relatively recent history in the eastern U.S.

In less than 60 years, house finches have expanded their range from the eastern seaboard to the Rocky Mountains.

Today, 62 percent of feeder watchers have them at their feeders. This is a very adaptable species.

More than half the participants reported downy woodpeckers at their feeders. This insect eater has adapted easily to suet feeders.

Insect eaters, like downy woodpeckers, often substitute suet as a winter food supply. They have also capitalized on the abundance of sunflower seeds offered at feeders.

Downy's are eating seeds and taking advantage of this high energy source of food that is found at most feeders.

Though the black-capped chickadee may be the first bird to find your feeding station, they are not the most common species reported. They are fifth among the top ten.

Chickadees enjoy suet and sunflower seeds. Their rapid metabolism requires as much energy as they can get. A small body like theirs cools much faster than larger bodies.

Tied for fifth place with the chickadee is the American Goldfinch.

Most feeder watchers enjoy these birds because of their color, size, and pleasant vocalizations. Goldfinch enjoy thistle seed, but will eat sunflower seeds as well.

They tend to be patchy in their distribution, so don't be surprised if you don't have any at your feeder.

Despite the fact that northern cardinals have only been nesting in Michigan for just a little over a hundred years, they too have adapted very well to our feeders.

They are masters at extracting the kernel of a sunflower seed from its husk. Their powerful bill cracks through the husk with little difficulty.

Blue jays are eighth on the list and enjoy sunflower seeds, like the last two on the top ten list, the white-breasted nuthatch and the tufted titmouse.

Though these are the top ten birds seen at feeders, they all get most of their food from the wild.

Our feeders really help them when there is an extended storm, but you will also see your feeder birds in the forests and meadows most of the time.

So enjoy them when they do come to your feeders, it's much easier to find them!

Hall of Famer Mohacsi offers bowling tips

Mary Mohacsi is a member of four halls of fame, the WIBC, DWBA, MWBA and MAS.

Mary Mohacsi Top bowler

Her accomplishments are far too many to list here, and in addition to her bowling exploits, she operates The Right Approach pro shop along with son, Mark inside Merri Bowl Lanes in Livonia. With over twenty years experience in fitting bowling balls, she offers this advice on getting set up properly with the right equipment.

"The best way to get fitted is to bring your old ball in and let the pro shop person who will do the fitting, drilling and help with ball selection look at the way you throw on the lanes. "The fitter can watch your ball speed, hand rotation, how you get the ball out on the lanes and what line you are favoring. "The ways to fit a ball are conventional, semi-fingertip or full fingertip. New bowlers should start with conventional grip. "That gives them a good hold on the ball and allows them to work on their game from the approach to the foul line. "Once they get the basics down and get over about 140 in average, then they can go to a semi or full

OHL statistical leaders

The Whalers continue to dominate the OHL, both statistically and record-wise.

Second in the OHL in scoring is Plymouth's Adam Colagiaco with 41 points. He has 12 goals, including a league-best five game-winners, and his 29 assists places him third.

The Whalers' offense isn't limited to its forwards, either. Defenseman Nikos Tselios has 11 goals and 18 assists for 29 points, ranking him second in the OHL. Teammate Paul Mara has five goals and 12 assists for 17 points, ninth-best in the league.

Goalie Robert Holsinger is second in goals-against average (2.22) and is tied for second in save percentage (.917) with Barrie's Brian Finley. MEN'S COLLEGE HOOPS

Rochester gets past Madonna

Close, but not quite.

Madonna University's men's basketball team had a shot at the buzzer, but John-Mark Branch's three-point buzzer shot missed, leaving the Fighting Crusaders on the short end of a 71-68 decision against Rochester College Wednesday at Madonna.

The loss left Madonna with a 1-3 record. Rochester improved to 4-3.

The Crusaders led 38-33 at the intermission after converting 17-of-31 first-half shots (54.8 percent). Rochester made just 13-of-32 in the opening 20 minutes (40.6 percent), but improved that to 12-of-22 (54.5 percent) in the second while Madonna made just 12-of-35 second-half shots (34.3 percent). The Crusaders outrebounded Rochester, 40-31.

Rochester quickly overcame Madonna's halftime lead, outscoring the Crusaders 9-2 in the first four minutes of the second half. It was back-and-forth from then on, with Rochester eventually building a 66-60 lead on a Bob Kofahl layup with 1:53 remaining.

Trailing 69-65, Madonna's Mike Massey knocked down a three-pointer to trim Rochester's lead to one with eight seconds to go. The Crusaders fouled Cemon Smith with seven seconds left and Smith hit both free throws, making the margin three and setting up Branch's final-second try.

Massey led Madonna with 26 points, converting 11-of-18 floor shots (including 4-of-6 three-pointers). Mike Maryanski added 14 points and nine rebounds and Nick Hurlley totaled 10 points, four assists and four steals.

Kofahl's 18 points paced Rochester. Pete Males (Schoolcraft College and Garden City High) added 12 points, four steals and three assists, with Scott Wisniewski and Chris Doak netting 11 points apiece and Smith getting 10. Wisniewski also had eight rebounds.

SCHOOLCRAFT 119, FANSHAW 61:
The powerful Ocelots continue to roll with five players scoring in double figures in the opening game Friday of the Fanshawe (Ont.) College Tournament.

Lamar Bigby led Schoolcraft with 21 points while Chris Colley and Derek McKelvey each scored 15.

Dashawn Williams and Mike Peck each hit 10 to help the Ocelots improve to 3-0.

Schoolcraft held a 69-36 lead at the half and wound up making 24-of-44 free throws.
